Paint permit appealed

By Rebecca Lipchitz

Residents opposed to a paint manufacturing plant on the Andover/Tewksbury border filed an appeal last week with the state Fire Marshal, seeking to overturn a vote by the Board of Selectmen to allow the storage of flammables at the site.

At a July 19 meeting, selectmen approved a permit for California Products Inc. to store 184,000 gallons of flammable or combustible material on the site where they would manufacture paint at Dascomb Road near Route 93.

Residents say they believe the plant is too close to residences to be allowed to store flammables and emit toxic fumes.

In a letter to Fire Marshal Stephen Coan signed by 160 people, resident Jodi Cataldo requested a hearing to review the selectmen's decision.

"I am not here for any other reason, nor (is) anyone else who signed this letter, except for concern for our health and safety. Please investigate

Lifeguard a hero at Poms Pond

By Neil Fater

As a lifeguard at toddler-friendly Poms Pond, Mike Burnett has heard plenty of kids scream in his ear. But on Saturday, he actually enjoyed it.

That's because the 3-year-old boy crying in his ear Saturday was convincingly letting Burnett know that he could breathe again.

Burnett, 17 and a future Andover High School senior, had just saved the child from a near drowning.

"Once he heard sirens and he looked around at what was happening, he started wailing. Wailing right in my ear," says Burnett. "That was the best sound I heard — him crying. Usually, it's annoying, but (this time) it was a sound I loved to hear."

Burnett says lifeguards noticed the boy in the water around 6 p.m. Saturday, as many people were leaving the pond.

"We saw a kid floating," says Burnett. "I watched him for about five to eight seconds. He was in a 'dead man's float' position. We have a lot of kids who do the dead man's float."

But something seemed strange with the boy police later identified as Anthony Amara, of Oxford Street, Lawrence.

"It just seemed weird, because he wasn't moving at all," says Burnett.

Police procure some pot-ted plants

By Neil Fater

Whoever was growing the 10-foot-high marijuana plants that Andover police confiscated last week didn't set any records for "getting high."

Andover police, who confiscate such plants once or twice per year, say they've seen marijuana plants that were even taller.

"We've gotten higher ones than that," says Sergeant William MacKenzie. "I remember years ago we got some off of Greenwood Road, under the power lines. Those were 12 feet high."

Last week, police found about five plants the height of basketball rims in the woods off Stinson Road, after breaking up a party at one of the Stinson Road homes.

"They were all potted and at least 10 feet high," says MacKenzie, who believes the plants could have been cultivated to produce enough weed to sell. Police are still investigating the incident, says MacKenzie.

But when it comes to growing pot, getting

The Market Man — Larry Cookson is finally hanging up his jacket after 40 years with the Market Basket, which began as the Elm Farm Market.

A nourishing career

You might think that someone who spends a good part of his life working for a grocery store would have something to say about groceries. But Larry Cookson, 57, of Andover told the story of his 40 year-career at Market Basket with barely any mention of food.

"The thing I liked about it was meeting a lot of interesting people. You get to know a lot of people who shop there regularly. That's what makes it enjoyable to go to work every day," Cookson says.

Cookson retired last week after 40 years in the supermarket business working for Market Basket. He spent more than 20 years at the Market Basket in Andover, and retired as the store's assistant manager.

But even at the age of 16 Cookson knew where his bread was buttered.

"I bothered the manager for two months to get a job," he says, until he was hired sorting bottles for the Elm Farm Market, which later became part of DeMoulas markets in 1965, which are now known as Market Basket.

He worked is way up through the company and was stationed at various area stores until he moved back to the Andover store in 1972, where he stayed.

He also managed to bring home the bacon.

"It was a good job for raising a family," says the father of three children who all graduated from college. Two of them are now married.

Store manager Matthew Mattson says he and his staff, in honor of Cookson's retirement, raised his smock into the rafters. Mattson, known for his antics on the store's public address system, says he sang over the loudspeaker Saturday at the end of Cookson's last shift: "There he goes, Mr. Supermarket."

Cookson has watched the nature of the business change for the bigger, he says. As supermarkets get larger, people require more and more services, like prepared food from their grocer.

The biggest complaint about the Andover store, he says, is that there is no in-store bakery.

Mattson says Cookson served as a role model to many employees who worked under him.

"He's an enthusiastic, energetic worker, with all those old-fashioned values we look for desperately today. A lot of people look up to him," Mattson says.

Cookson has also been known to make the most of his free time by skiing, golfing, rollerblading, playing hockey, and traveling, Mattson says.

Cookson was born in South Lawrence and moved to Andover

AFS sponsors 'mother exchange'

The American Field Service (AFS) has always been globally recognized as a student exchange organization that promotes world peace through cultural understanding.

Now it has added a new "mother exchange" to its international program.

Locally, it began when a Finnish mother came to Andover for her AFS son's graduation from Andover High School. She met her son's host family and other members of the local AFS club and asked, "Why should these wonderful cultural exchanges be only limited to the young?"

That question prompted a one-week exchange between six Finnish mothers, all involved with AFS, and their Andover counterparts.

Another visit is planned to Finland for June 2000, by a group of local AFS mothers. For more information on AFS, call Dot Hillbink, 475-4689, or Lesley Whitley, 475-8480.

Rules for burial at sea

In the aftermath of the Kennedy/Besette tragedy, Veterans Agent John Doherty says he has received a number of inquiries about burial at sea, and offers the following information:

1. The U.S. Navy performs both burials of bodies and spreading of ashes at sea.

2. Deceased veterans of honorable service of any U.S. branch of the military are eligible, including Merchant Marine personnel of the Military Sealift Command. Under certain circumstances, dependents may be eligible.

3. Other U.S. citizens may qualify, if the admiral commanding a naval district determines that he/she has performed "notable service" or made "outstanding contributions" to the United States. This is almost never done.

4. The Navy has numerous and strict requirements that apply to casketed remains.

5. Following burial at sea, the Navy will usually provide the next of kin with spent cartridges from the rifle salute and a map showing the approximate location of the burial.

6. Portsmouth, Va., Naval Base handles all East Coast burials. Newport, R.I., is no longer used, due to lack of ships.

in 1950. He attended a one-room school house in Andover, and delivered papers on a route near his River Road home.

As a man who remembered the days when his father always bought a car from the same salesman, who would deliver it to their home, Cookson says he enjoyed his career at the Market Basket in Shawsheen Plaza because the big chain store feeling never quite took over.

"There's a nice, hometown feel in Andover," he says.

Mattson credits Cookson with the store's continued success when the big chain markets moved into town.

"We've fared very well against our competition, and he is surely instrumental in that.

So how is Market Basket going to compete without Larry Cookson?

"I'm going to have to work harder," Mattson says.

Mega-reunion draws 90 to Andover

They converged on the home of an innocent Lovejoy Road attorney like travelers from all over the country, which in fact they were.

But they were also the family of Andover resident and local attorney David Bernardin, and this was the mammoth family reunion he has spent much of his free time organizing in the last few months.

The Bernardin clan came 90 strong from all over New England and many other states to partake in the festivities, devour Philly Cheese Steak subs and indulge in family history.

"It (the reunion) went extremely well," says Bernardin. "We had a tremendous turnout, especially from the family of the primary celebrants."

The primary celebrants were Bernardin's twin cousins, Dick Bernardin and Helen Bernardin Fielding, who were celebrating their 75th birthday. The birthday celebration brought one of the highlights of the afternoon, in the form of a surprise guest.

"The twins' half-brother, Al Bernardin from California (creator of the Quarter-Pounder and Filet-of-Fish sandwiches for McDonald's, by the way), happened to be on Cape Cod, and he managed a surprise visit," says Bernardin. "He showed up despite a broken foot, made a toast and told some old stories."

Needless to say, Bernardin had his hands full with organizing enough activities for his many family members. He was up to the task, however, setting up tennis and horseshoe games, along with a wading pool for the children in attendance.

"We ran a tennis tournament in our backyard for about 20 years," he says. "So we are used to handling crowds and providing for them."

Indeed, Bernardin set up large tents in his backyard for shelter from the heat, rented a PA system for speeches and toasts, and had a genealogy booth set up for gazing at old family pictures.

The catering was top of the line as well, as Bernardin arranged for his cousin, John Bernardin, who runs the South Philly Cheese Steak restaurant at the Pheasant Lane Mall, to

They'll ride to help beat cancer

Close friends and family lost, suffering loved ones, or just a simple desire to serve mankind are among the reasons that will bring thousands of people from all over the country together this weekend for the 20th annual Pan-Mass Challenge bike ride.

Now the country's oldest and most successful bicycling fund raiser, the Pan-Mass Challenge, sponsored by MFS Investment Management, has raised more than $34 million for the Jimmy Fund of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute since its modest beginnings with 36 riders and 10 volunteers in 1980.

The event, founded by Billy Starr, a journalist who lives in Wellesley and whose family has often been stricken by cancer, has now become the largest single contributor to the Jimmy Fund.

Among those 2,700 riders will be 13 Andover residents, all of whom have particular reasons for riding, and similar respect for the fund raiser.

"After my third year of riding (in the Pan-Mass), I really started looking more closely at the PMC," says Eric Hamblet, 31, who will now be riding for a sixth year. "What helped me to get committed to them was their commitment to their mission and to help the Jimmy Fund and cancer patients."

Since 1995, the PMC's contribution to the Jimmy Fund has grown by $1 million each year, topping off at $6.7 million last year. It has also consistently met its goal of contributing 90 percent or more of the money it raises directly to the fund.

"With the progression I have seen in the last five years, I would not be surprised to see donations hit $7.5 million this year," says Hamblet. "Billy Starr and the people he has recruited to help promote the event have done an outstanding job."

Part of that job is to deal with bed and food issues, leaving bikers to worry about nothing but the road ahead, according to numerous Andover riders.

"All you really have to do is ride. All the other stuff is taken care of for you," says Matt Kiley, 34, who will be riding in his fifth PMC. "It's unbelievable. All of the luggage and bikes they move for people. With all of the organizing they have to do, to turn around at the end of the day and still see them donate 90 percent of the money is incredible."

More than 1,700 volunteers help organize food stands for the riders, which will distribute the 8,000 burgers, 2,000 pounds of chicken, 24,000 pounds of ice and 75,000 rolls, among many other things, donated by more than 200 corporations.

"The organization of the PMC is really superb," says Bruce Landay, 37, who will be riding in his fifth PMC. "It is a truly excellent organization, and makes the ride a lot of fun and very safe. It has been a real pleasure, almost like a vacation. You can get away from work and just think about biking. It's nice."

The PMC offers riders six different routes,

Bike collision — Shawn Burns, 14, of Memorial Circle, was injured Tuesday at 11 a.m. when police said he rode his bike in front of a car on Chestnut Street. He was later taken to Lawrence General Hospital. According to Deputy Fire Chief Chuck Murnane, Burns hit his head on the windshield, and lost consciousness for a minute. The driver, John O'Connor, of Lawrence (above), was not cited for any traffic violation. Young Burns was cited, however, for failing to stop before entering a roadway.

Uncle charged in police chase

A 21-year-old Andover man, apparently hoping to avoid arrest, now stands accused of taking two of his young relatives on a police chase Tuesday evening.

Gordon Baldacchino, of 10 Marland St., Andover, ended up both being arrested and damaging his sports car on York Street.

Police say Baldacchino was first pulled over on Elm Street after running a red light.

"He handed the officer a paper license. As the officer was going back to check it, he fled the scene," says Lt. Phillip Froburg.

Police estimated Baldacchino's speed at more than 50 m.p.h. as he traveled down High Street, says Froburg, but there was always some distance between an officer and the speeding car.

"The officer kept catching glimpses of him as he turned corners," he says.

After a less-than-five-minute chase, Baldacchino took a corner onto York Street, lost control of the car and hit a pole, says Froburg.

In the car with Baldacchino were two children, a 4-year-old and a 4-month-old, who police say are related to Baldacchino. A 17-year-old female was also in the car.

"The female, I don't know what her relationship is, but I believe the children were his niece and nephew," says Froburg.

The three passengers were taken to Baldacchino's Marland Street address, and Baldacchino was arrested and charged with driving with a revoked license, failing to stop for police while driving, driving recklessly so as to endanger, speeding, driving with a suspended registration, attaching plates to a vehicle, and a seat belt and red light violation.

For the record

In the Townsmen's July 22 police log, the dispatcher's remarks provided to the paper about a July 27 accident in the Andover Bank parking lot said "a woman reported backing into a young boy on a bike who emerged from the bushes."

In their official report, police reported that the bicyclist had struck the vehicle. The bicyclist had appeared from out of some bushes while traveling east in a parking lot had hit the car, which was traveling south, on the driver's side, said police. The bicyclist was not wearing a helmet or traveling on a path, and was transported to Lawrence General. The driver was not issued any citation.

higher isn't necessarily getting better, it seems.

Police say that when marijuana plants are smaller, they can be masked by other weeds in the woods.

"That stuff blends in. The only way to really see it is (that) it can tower over the other plants," says MacKenzie.

As the plants become larger they are not only easier to see, but also to smell. The marijuana plants confiscated last week were only in the police station for a few hours, and their odor remained for a few days.

Although police frequently arrest people of all ages for both possessing and selling marijuana in Andover, Lt. Kevin Winters says officers only find people growing marijuana plants once or twice per year.

"We don't get a lot of it, but people do it. Kids do it," says Detective Sergeant Don Pattullo. "We've had it in the past but it doesn't happen every day."

Church group gets permission to use the Park weekly

By Neil Fater

When the Board of Selectmen voted last Monday to allow a North Reading church group to host a weekly Bible study and picnic in the Park downtown, they also may have allowed much more.

In fact, the board may have unlocked a legal door that could force the town to allow any non-Andover group to host an activity in the Park for three consecutive Sundays.

Before they approved the church activity, Town Counsel Tom Urbelis told selectmen that, hypothetically, Andover could be forced legally to grant a similar request from any other non-Andover group, including the Ku Klux Klan.

The vote was 3-1, with Larry Larson opposed and Lori Becker absent, to allow a North Reading congregation, Calvary Chapel Northshore, to use the Park for a Bible study and picnic for three consecutive Sundays, Aug. 1 to Aug. 15.

The church group had asked for permission to use the Park for 10 consecutive Sunday nights, for two and a half hours each night, but some selectmen were concerned that 10 weeks was too dangerous a precedent to set.

"I'm concerned about the length of time, concerned about the precedent," said Selectman Mary French. "Ten weeks in a row sounds like an awful lot."

However, Chairman John Hess said, "It just doesn't seem to me it matters if they do it one night or several different nights."

Hess also said he saw no difference between the church group using the Park and groups such as basketball leagues using the town's gym on a weekly basis for months. But others noted that the groups that use town buildings must pay to rent those buildings.

"I think the analogy of the basketball court is not the same. This is an ongoing religious event going on in our common, by a congregation that's not based in Andover, I might add," said Larsen. "I would not be inclined to open that door."

But his proposal to allow just one week drew no support.

If the town had approved the church group's original 10-week request, the group would have gathered in the Park each Sunday from Aug. 1 to Oct. 3 from 4:30 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Selectmen say that if all goes well with the first three weeks, they may approve more weeks for the church.

When the issue was first addressed, Larsen said he could not support allowing a religious group to use outdoor public land on a consistent basis.

"I really can't approve of this. This is a very different kind of thing than I think we've ever had," said Larsen. "This is an ongoing religious use of common land, and I have a problem with that."

"Keeping church and state separate is an important issue."

French said she had similar concerns.

But Urbelis told selectmen the subject matter of the activity should not be a factor in their decision, because the town legally must treat each group the same.

"The decision should not be made based on the fact that there will be a religious use," said Urbelis. "It's a matter of consistency."

Evaluation is past due

Word this past week that an evaluation of Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski by the Board of Selectmen has been essentially stalled for a year should not cause us to worry that the foundation of local government will suddenly crumble.

Bureaucracies, large and small, tend to move along by their own inertia, barring any major disasters.

Besides, one can always argue that there are more pressing things on the plate, from deciding what to do about Main Street to trying to juggle the competing interests in the volatile mix of industry bumping up against residential neighborhoods.

And one might also argue that an evaluation of any town manager by a board of selectmen is suspect, since it will be laden with the overtones of various political agendas, and have little to do with competence or management skills.

Still, it is unsettling for something like this to be allowed to slide for as long as it has. While an evaluation of the manager probably falls into the "routine," and therefore not terribly exciting, category of things to do every year, it is important for several reasons:

- It forces board members to articulate a vision for how they hope to improve the town, instead of simply reacting to events as they occur. It is also an inducement for them to speak with a unified voice on at least some issues.

- It gives at least one somewhat objective measure by which to measure the performance of the manager.

- It sends a message that selectmen are serious about accomplishing the goals they set for their executive. If the board sets goals and then never bothers to review them to see if they have been reached, what busy manager would take them seriously?

- It forces the board and the manager to communicate about how to accomplish what the board really wants. Managers, typically, are great at providing long lists of all the things they have done in a year. But it is up to the board to make sure that list includes the things they said they wanted done.

- It should be obvious that while the manager runs the town, day to day, it is selectmen who are directly accountable to voters. If only for their own political credibility, they need to be seen as directly involved in making sure it runs according to their wishes.

So, uncomfortable or not, the board should dust off their preliminary evaluations, get together and get it done.

A few lessons in Midwestern hospitality

Taylor Armerding

It's not that I'm against the Midwest. Several of the best years of my life were spent in a suburban enclave near Chicago.

But it was never my ambition to spend my life there. I was born in the East, came to love the ocean and the mountains, and had essentially decided by the time I was through high school that, as nice as everybody was, as big as the sky was and as good as the corn was, I was going to live where real mountains were just an hour's drive away or less, and the ocean was something more immediate than a distant dream.

That hasn't changed, more than 25 years later. Even a trip to Colorado earlier this year, where an old college buddy who had lived on Cape Ann for a while went on and on about the joys of low humidity and real mountains — not those pretenders out in New England — made me want to uproot.

That doesn't mean, however, that we sophisticated easterners can't learn a thing or two from those in the farming communities of the bread basket.

A reminder of that lavish Midwestern hospitality came on my very first day in Iowa, where I spent a part of last week pedaling across the state with about 14,000 of my closest personal friends.

My goal was to bring the electronic office to the Register's Annual Great Bike Ride Across Iowa (RAGBRAI). I had brought a laptop from the Townsmen, and Dick Chapell, of Andover Photo, was kind enough to let me borrow one of the store's newer digital cameras.

The plan was to pull into a town, find a phone jack and e-mail a story and pictures back to the home office.

That was the plan. And portions of it actually worked out. But, well, other portions didn't. And you really don't want to hear the details. They're far too long, boring and stressful.

The immediate issue Saturday afternoon, however, was brought on by the relentless march of technology. I had a brand-new Mac PowerBook. It features the new so-called USB connectors. The camera was rigged with a cable for the not-quite-so-new serial port cables.

And therefore, the camera and the computer wouldn't "talk" to one another.

At the local high school in Rock Rapids, which was set up as the information center for the thousands of bikers pouring into town for the start of the ride, I started asking people behind the desk if there were any computer stores in town.

They smiled, gently, hiding their amusement. Not in Rock Rapids, they said. Probably the nearest place would be Sioux Falls (S.D.), about 35 miles away, and from where I had just come on a shuttle bus.

I expected that would be the end of the conversation. There were other people waiting in line, and this wasn't really their problem. But David Sieperda, a friendly barrel of a man, came around the side of the table, pulling a cell phone from his pocket.

"Here," he said. "Use this. See if you can find a place that's open. There are phone books over there."

"I appreciate that," I said. "But I don't really have a way to get back there, even if I can find a place."

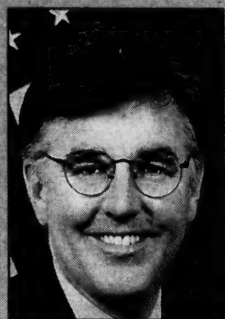

"What do you mean you don't have a way?" he demanded. "You just use my car. I only live a couple of miles away."

That wasn't all Sieperda did. He basically spent the next hour on my individual problem. After I rode my bike over to his place, he took me over to his office to get me a good map. He wrote out detailed direc-

Letters

In praise of Title IX

Martin Meehan

It was the spring of 1998, and the Andover High girls' basketball team was in the Worcester Centrum. These young women were the Eastern Massachusetts champions, and were taking on the mighty Minnechaug Regional squad.

Andover's Warriors unfortunately lost the game, but they were all winners in the greatest sense. By the night of this game, the number of girls playing basketball in Andover had gone up to 400 — triple the number of three years ago.

The Merrimack Valley is truly blessed to be such a hotbed for athletic success among young women. Andover, Methuen and Haverhill have all become basketball powerhouses. Girls across our region are playing soccer, basketball, baseball, softball and a host of team sports.

It wasn't always this way. Unfortunately, past generations of young female athletes and leaders were stifled by the cultural limitations that discouraged young girls from participating in team sports. I cannot help but believe that the explosive success of the U.S. Women's World Cup team will lead even more young girls in Massachusetts, and across the country, to broaden their own ambitions and dream about one day achieving similar levels of success.

Indeed, members of the U.S. National Soccer team — elite athletes who are also mothers, college graduates and women pursuing successful careers — captured the hearts of all Americans over the past month in a way that few teams of either gender ever have. "Wow, that mom rocks," shouted one father, as he watched Joy Fawcett, mother of two, head in the game-winning goal during the U.S. quarter-final victory over Germany — no doubt the first time that exclamation has ever been heard at the Washington Redskins' Jack Kent Cooke Stadium.

As gender stereotypes and barriers continue to crumble, thanks in large part to shots like Fawcett's, and critical saves like those made by the University of Massachusetts' own Briana Scurry, athletic glory is no longer the exclusive domain of boys' dreams. Brandi Chastain's game-winning penalty kick in the World Cup finals joins such singular moments as Carlton Fisk's home run in game 6 of the 1975 World Series and Doug Flutie's 1984 "Miracle in Miami" in the annals of sports.

These women have enlightened us to a reality that has never been acknowledged enough: athleticism knows no gender boundaries. Today, strength and toughness in the mind, spirit and body are qualities that are finally revered in both sexes. The U.S. women's victory sends a powerful message to the world about the valuable role of sports in building character, self-confidence and teamwork among young women.

This success, and the surging popularity of all types of women's sports over the last two decades, is a tribute to Title IX, the landmark federal law that mandated equal opportunities for women athletes in high schools and colleges. Title IX turned 27 last Friday — the same age as star soccer forward Mia Hamm — and there couldn't be a more fitting celebration than a World Cup victory.

When President Nixon signed the Educational Amendments Act of 1972, which authorized the Title IX program, about 300,000 American girls were participating in high school sports. Today, that number is nearly 2.5 million. Two years after Title IX was enacted, an estimated 50,000 men, compared to roughly 50 women, attended U.S. colleges on athletic scholarships. Today, women receive about a third of all college athletic scholarships, giving many women opportunities for higher education that they may not otherwise have been able to afford.

Some people may say Title IX has nothing to do with the success of the American Women's World Cup team. However, this law has provided women and girls with more opportunities to participate in athletics and more equitable facilities. In addition, because of Title IX, the salaries for coaches on women's teams have increased.

Yet, the impact of gender equality in sports goes far beyond figures and numbers from playing fields, TV ratings or ticket sales. Eighty percent of women identified as key leaders in Fortune 500 companies participated in sports growing up.

Moreover, extensive research has shown that young women who are active in sports are more likely to have greater confidence, higher levels of self-esteem and more pride in their physical and social selves than girls who do not take part in athletics. Just as importantly, they are less likely to experiment with drugs, less likely to get pregnant, and more likely to graduate from high school. Girls and women are now learning what boys and men have always known — that sports nurtures pride, a sense of accomplishment, discipline and teamwork and a positive competitive spirit applicable to all areas of life.

A plea for the preservation of trees

Editor, Townsmen:

I turned onto Punchard Avenue early one morning last week to find the street covered with green leafy branches, and a town crew in a cherry picker busily adding more foliage to the piles. There didn't seem to be anyone on the ground supervising, and given the enthusiasm with which the man in the bucket was wielding his saw, I was afraid there would be little left of the trees but their topknots. (I wasn't far wrong.)

On calling the tree superintendent's office, I learned that he was on vacation, and no one there could tell me anything about the tree trimming. I expressed my concern that the crew might attack next the two lindens around the corner on Bartlet Street, which are still standing only because some of the street's residents fought the town's plans to remove them before the reconstruction of Bartlet a few years ago. I was told my concern would be noted.

On looking around the downtown area, I see that there is now a policy of hacking off all branches below a certain height, regardless of the damage to the health of the tree (especially in a drought year), and without any apparent justification in most cases. Most of the branches were not in the way of power lines and were not low enough to bother vehicles or pedestrians. Even the small trees in the town parking lot off Bartlet Street have been savaged, reduced to so many green lollipops. They look terrible, and there was no need to touch them at all.

Next, I hear, will be the removal of some trees, crabapples I presume, near the bridge in the Park. In heaven's name, why? This is not a golf course, it's a public park. Trees are not nuisances; they're assets — oases of shade, which in this of all summers should be treasured, not destroyed.

The new trees planted around town are much appreciated (although no one seemed to be watering them during the drought). In the matter of "trimming" (or more accurately mutilation, as typified by the pear trees in Elm Square), the tree department seems to be out of control — or some of its employees are. This is not arboriculture, it's a chainsaw mentality, and the cutting should stop while we still have some shade left.

Selectmen showed no regard for people

Editor, Townsmen:

OK, we confess; we are new at this. Given that we have four children, the majority of our time in "town activities" has been spent in religious education programs, soccer, baseball and the schools. We have not been actively involved in town politics.

While we usually vote, we have never gone to a selectmen's or town meeting.

The night before the selectmen's vote on the California Paint permit, one of our neighbors explained to us what was going on. We quickly got involved and were very surprised to read statistics concerning environmental factors and disease rates in Boston and neighboring communities.

Did you know that Andover has more contaminated sites (55) per person than Brockton, Chelsea, Revere or Boxford, Wellesley and Weston? This may not be new information to some but it was certainly distressing to us.

Our concern led us to attend the selectmen's meeting along with approximately 200 other interested parties. The majority of these people were "first-timers" and homeowners. While the actions of two of these people (1 percent of those attending) have gotten a lot of attention (see the recent letter to the Townsmen "The action was uncivil," July 29), the arrogance of Mr. Hess and Mr. Major was alarming and, we believe, overlooked in the subsequent reporting of this meeting.

We were very disappointed to see what little regard was given to the people who showed up at this meeting. This item was essentially the last item on that night's agenda. While I am sure parliamentary procedure was followed, what would it have taken to have spent some time to listen to the concerns of those who attended?

I would have liked to have understood (and still do) why, in light of the contaminated site issue mentioned above, our elected officials would even consider allowing a company to come into our community that could increase the problem.

I recognize that the reason is probably financial but nevertheless, our concerns merited public discussion even if it was at a late hour.

Having experienced this political process first hand, we are reminded that we can not always rely on our elected officials to do the right thing. Dr. Larsen's vote against this "paint factory" took courage and awareness. He had it right when he said later that people would like to feel like they are at least listened to.

Residents of Andover should focus on what is being done about the problems we already have, remember who is receptive to and respectful of those concerns and remember to vote accordingly.

including the original 192-mile Sturbridge to Provincetown route. Other routes also start in Waltham and run to different ending points.

Lining all of the routes are many cancer patients and survivors, there to thank the riders for their help, and to encourage them onward.

"There are people cheering you along the route," says Hamblet. "But then you also see the people who have battled cancer there, and it's inspiring."

"Everyone who goes is in a good mood, because they feel good for helping others," says Kiley. "The mood is conducive to feeling good. There is not a bad element in the ride, even when it rains. There are people you renew relationships with every year and there are people that you begin to recognize each time."

Just the sight of all the bikers can be amazing as well.

"To be on a bike at 6 a.m. going over the Bourne Bridge with 300 other people on bikes is quite a sight," says Hamblet.

But each person also has a specific reason for starting to ride in the PMC in the first place.

"I think we all have someone we are riding for," says Susan Ratyna, 48, who will be riding in her first PMC. "I am riding for my friend from the office, Bill, who has been a longtime patient, and my close friend Jeanne, who died too young because of cancer. She pedals the bike, not me. It's the energy that a debilitated Bill has that pedals for me. And then it's also the unknowns. That's why we thousands of bikers ride."

"The diagnosis of my mother with cancer is the impetus that got me involved," says Hamblet. "As the list of people I know affected by cancer grows, I realize I am fortunate to have my health, and this is something I should do because I have my health."

"Fund raising is getting easier," says Kiley. "But the ride is getting tougher, mostly because finding time for training is getting harder."

Other Andover residents participating in the Pan-Mass Challenge are five year veteran Steve Huggins, two year veterans Terry Wetzler-Finn, Steven Finn, Scott Richardson, John Drake, Howard Spector, Mark Noonan, and rookies Marc Vachon and David Morgenstern.

This is why protecting Title IX is so important.

As a member of Congress, I benefit from these gains every day. Some of the most successful and hardworking women on my staff are the daughters of Title IX. These women — an All-American lacrosse player from Bowdoin College, a full-scholarship volleyball standout from Georgetown University, and varsity soccer player from Dartmouth College — display key leadership and teamwork skills nurtured through their participation on collegiate teams.

It is unfortunate that any man would feel threatened by the growing popularity of women's team sports. Whether it be a WNBA game or the Women's World Cup finals, these men decry the "feminization of sports" and go to great lengths to point out that women are inferior to men in strength and speed. They then conclude that women just can't be as good at sports.

Would these men pit middleweight Sugar Ray Leonard in the boxing ring against heavyweight Muhammad Ali, who outweighed him by 60 pounds? Both men were great champions, but they deserved to fight different classes. Similarly, whether played above or below the rim, elite men's and women's basketball games can and should be appreciated for their unique qualities and style.

Sports indeed is an important issue for women's equality — like political participation and pay equity. They affect leadership development and women's health, and the exclusion of women from team sports creates a false image of women as the weaker sex, which can lead to exploitation in other parts of life.

Fortunately, the recent successes of women on the playing field are a hint of what all American women can achieve in the new millennium. Each and every young girl who painted her face red, white and blue and cheered in raucous celebration for the Women's World Cup victory now has an even greater chance to grow into a woman with unstoppable confidence and dreams, planning to make her mark in the 21st century.

tions. He told me to take his cell phone, in case I got lost on the way, or was going to get the place just before closing time.

And for all that, he waved away any thanks or offer of payment. "You'd have done the same for me," he said.

I hope so. But to be honest, I'm not sure I'd have been so immediately willing to put my car in the hands of a total stranger from halfway across the country, especially once he knew I was from the state that practically invented Road Rage and reckless driving.

He wasn't the only one. The staff at the Mirror Reporter in Clear Lake welcomed the strange creature staggering into their office, oozing sweat, claiming he was a newspaper editor desperately in need of a corner to write a story and a way to e-mail it. They sat me down at one of their computers and told me to take all the time I needed.

Of course it's not as if that sort of thing would never happen here. I know people around here who are lavish in contributing both their time and money to strangers and friends. There are numerous families in Andover who open their homes and hearts to foreign students and their families.

Still, there is something about the expansive openness of the Iowans I encountered that was enough to throw me off balance. Maybe it comes from the expansiveness of the sky out there.

Because I know I have walls that tend to block how freely my generosity flows, just as the trees and the mountains block the sky around here.

I'm willing to share, but I have a tendency to want to know the agenda of the person asking for my help. I tend to want to know if they are "deserving" of my help, or if perhaps they ought to get their act together and help themselves. I tend to wonder if the person I'm helping will use my help "properly."

And I know I'm not the only person in this region who thinks that way. I've noticed more than a few times that a person's or a company's willingness to help others depends in part on how much publicity they're going to get for it.

In other words, while it's not true all the time, we New Englanders have a tendency to give with strings attached. And, of course, a gift not given freely is really no gift at all.

So I'm thankful to David Sieperda and a lot of other very generous people on the roads from Rock Rapids to Waverly, Iowa. He and others gave with open hands. They gave more than they were asked.

And they gave with the kind of trust that makes those on the receiving end want to make sure they are worthy of that trust.

Those are character traits that create a sense of community no matter where you are.

Residents meet architect for school projects

More than 20 residents turned out last week to tell architects their concerns about the proposed design of two new schools at Cross Street and High Plain Road.

School leaders held last week's forum at West Elementary School. A second forum is scheduled for Thursday, Aug. 12, at 7 p.m. at South School.

School Committee chairman Eric Nadworny says residents raised issues regarding where the buildings would be situated, where the access roads would be, and how visible the buildings or parking areas would be.

Lead architect Ed Frenette of Symmes, Maini & McKee, the firm hired to design the schools, says such concerns are not unusual.

"They voiced concerns, likes, dislikes, but it would be premature to say there's any result," he says.

He adds that architects are aware of how important it is that the public be involved in the process of designing the school, especially after problems with the Andover High School renovation project.

"They have certainly been sensitized by it," he says.

School Committee member Tina Girdwood says the concerns she heard weren't new, but she believes those attending left the meeting assured that architects were doing their homework.

Resident Justin Coppola, who graduated from Andover High this year and serves on the Commission for Disabilities, encouraged architects to consider issues of those who don't get around on foot.

While the new buildings are required to be handicapped-accessible, Frenette says the issue of handicap accessibility is particularly important to him. His best friend Stephen Spinetto, commissioner for the Commission for Persons with a Disability in Boston, is wheelchair bound.

Frenette has organized benefits in Spinetto's behalf, he says, adding, "I put my money where my mouth is."

Second forum set on school plans

Residents are invited to meet with school project architects Thursday, August 12 at South School, 55 Woburn Street, from 7 to 9 p.m. to discuss plans for the middle school and elementary school slated to be built at Cross Street and High Plain Roads.

Military education is for the few, the focused, the organized students

By Rebecca Lipchitz

Timothy Krey has always had his head in the clouds. He has dreamed of becoming a pilot since he was a child. At 3 years old, his parents took him to a trade show where an Air Force recruiter pinned a set of wings on his shirt.

From that moment on, his mother says, her son has wanted to become a pilot.

But Krey says his real interest developed a little later in life, at his first visit to the air show at the Hanscom Air Force base. He left Tuesday to spend a year at the New Mexico Military Institute, a prep school for the Air Force Academy where he expects to enroll the following year.

While being pinned by an Air Force recruiter as a child may make it seem he was chosen for such a profession, becoming a military pilot requires a lifetime of planning and hard work, he says.

Krey, a graduate of Andover High School, has spent nearly a lifetime planning to attend the U.S. Air Force Academy, one of several service academies that require preparation that takes years of research and a focused plan.

Service academies, like the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, are very academically and physically demanding says Allison Brown Collins, program adviser for the Andover High School Guidance Department.

Krey says the Air Force Academy chooses only 1,200 of their 50,000 applicants annually.

The four most prominent service academies in the country are the Air Force Academy; the Naval Academy in Annapolis, Maryland; the Military Academy of West Point; the Merchant Marine Academy of Kings Point, N.Y.; and the Coast Guard Academy of New London, Conn.

To earn an appointment to one of the service academies, where the military pays for most of one's tuition, one must have high SAT and AP exam test scores, written recommendations from teachers and local members of Congress, and be in top physical condition.

Once a student graduates from a service academy, he or she spends a mandatory amount of time in the service, and is likely to find a career there.

Aiming High— AHS graduate Timothy Krey displays a model F-15, a small version of the kind of plane he hopes to fly one day. He plans to enroll in the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado next fall.

Wayne M. Beasley, career counselor for the U.S. Coast Guard Academy and a Blue and Gold Office for the U.S. Naval Academy, says most graduates of service academies find careers in the service, but pilots and nuclear engineers also find profitable work in the private sector.

But one reason the military has a shortage of personnel is part of a vicious circle, Beasley says. Because there aren't enough ships going out to do all the Navy's work, crews that would normally be at sea for a month or two are out for three or four months at a time, he says.

While the Naval Academy attracts students mostly interested in engineering, it offers 19 majors, including liberal arts studies such as English, history and economics, Beasley says.

Krey says he may consider flying commercial jets after he retires, but he is most interested in flying military planes, models of which fill the walls above his bed. The blue flowered wallpaper in his room is barely visible, covered in posters of planes, including his favorite, the F-15 E, Strike Eagle version.

Krey is entering the New Mexico Military Institute on a scholarship from the Falcon Foundation. According to the foundation, 98 percent of their prep school graduates go on to the Air Force Academy.

Carlene Krey says that if her son can raise his SAT scores, he will have a nearly guaranteed space at the Air Force Academy in the fall.

Parental Guidance

Sheila Prout, mother of Andover's Justin F. Accomando, 19, says she advised her son that upon graduating from Phillips Academy, he should look for a university where he could have some fun.

"(But) he told me college was not about having fun. It's about getting an education and planning for his future. I guess he put me in my place," Prout says.

Accomando could not be reached for comment, since he left Andover in July, to enroll at the U.S. Naval Academy.

Choosing to attend a service academy over a civilian college or university is a big decision, Prout says, because of the amount of work involved, and the amount of commitment. Accomando will serve at least five years in the Navy after graduating from the Academy.

my.

"It's tough, and you're going to hate it, but if you can make it, you'll be really proud of what you've accomplished," Prout says.

The students who choose a service academy are focused on what they want early on, she says.

Krey says that by the time he sought college counseling from the Andover High School guidance office, he knew more about the Air Force Academy than the counselors did.

Collins says students usually know themselves if they want to consider the military route, and usually bring it up before counselors recommend it.

"It takes a really specific type of student to want to do that. They need to be really organized, and really know what they want. And early," she says.

Krey was encouraged to be career-oriented as a young student. His father, John Krey, a retired chemistry teacher who was trapped as an American civilian in Nazi Germany, says he hoped his son would become Lutheran pastor, but knew better than to try to change his mind. Rather, he encouraged his son to explore the idea.

"If you make up your mind, and then find out it's wrong, you're still ahead. As soon as you make a decision, you begin accumulating knowledge," he says.

Before he earned a driver's license, Krey, now 18, earned his pilot's license at 16 from Eagle East Aviation at the Lawrence Municipal Airport. He also met mentor Steve Marley, of Andover, who works at Raytheon, through the Service Club of Andover. Marley put Krey in touch with local people who had experience with military academies and flying fighter planes.

"Tim was amazing. His enthusiasm for flying was infectious," Marley says, who adds that because Tim was so driven, his experience as a mentor was very satisfying.

Military History

Both Krey and Accomando have an uncle who served in the military who, their parents say, served as an influence on their decision to seek a military education.

Krey is the nephew of the late Lt. Col. Frank Smith, formerly of Reading, and Accomando is nephew to the late Jay Prout, who graduated from Annapolis in 1966 but was killed in 1995 in a service-related accident. Then a two-star admiral, Prout was flying home to Andover to give the Memorial Day address when he died, says his sister, Sheila Prout.

Beat the heat at the Summer Shack

By Julie Viola
Andover Youth Services

The Andover Youth Services summer program, "Get on the Bus," is off and rolling to a great summer. The Youth Services staff and hundreds of participants have already engaged in activities such as whitewater-rafting, rock-climbing, trips to the movies, the aquarium, paint ball, and other thrilling summer activities. Because of the popularity of the program, many kids couldn't get all the trips they wanted. Have no fear, however, the AYS and DCS staff have put together a place where you can all come for a good time. Every Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7-9 p.m. the Summer Shack at the West Middle School gym will be the place to go. There are games to be played, movies to watch, video games to challenge, and food and beverages to consume. The AYS and DCS staff will be there to help you have a great time. So, drop in, it's free. Hope to see you there.

Horror in the Heat party for teens at Memorial Hall Library

Memorial Hall Library's Young Adult Department will sponsor a Horror in the Heat party Friday, Aug. 13, at 3 p.m. to wrap up the summer reading club. Participants in the Totally Unplugged Reading Club are invited to attend. Bring your "CD" reading record as proof of your participation. It is not too late to join the reading club, organizers said.

Teens entering grades 6 and up can pick up a reading record in the Young Adult Corner. Any reading or other activities can be recorded for credit. In addition to being a ticket for admittance to the party, the reading records will be used for entry in a door prize.

Free food and music, plus horrible stories will round out the afternoon. For more information, call Beth Kerrigan at 623-8401, Ext. 36.

Andover Public Schools Summer Reading Lists and books are available. The library has purchased multiple copies of these titles. Because some titles are to be read by the entire grade, the library staff encourages teens to put their requests in now.

For more information, call Beth Kerrigan or Barbara Mortenson at 623-8401, Ext. 36, or the reference desk at Ext. 31 or 32.

Keep Smiling!

More Than Just An Expression

There's more to keeping teeth healthy than by dealing with them in isolation. Your ageless smile requires solving problems beforehand by treating the mouth, jaw and related movement together.

Dr. Spencer H. Owades

Ask Yourself These Questions

Do my gums ever bleed?
Do my jaw joints make noise?
Do my teeth show signs of wear?
(Look at the top edges of your lower front teeth. Can you see a darker line where the enamel has worn away?)
Do I get headaches near my temples?

Do I grind or clench my teeth?
Are any of my teeth loose?
Can I chew comfortably on both sides?
Could my smile look better?
Are my teeth shifting?
Do I frequently need dental work, even though I have regular checkups?

If you answered "yes" to any of these questions, you may be having difficulties that go beyond typical dentistry. For the past dozen years, Dr. Spencer H. Owades has been helping individuals find solutions to these unique problems. Call to learn more about keeping that smile.

Putting a plug on parties

By Neil Fater

Saying they want to stop youth parties on school land, police made an example Tuesday night of four youths who had gathered with dozens of others at Sanborn School.

"We've been getting complaints about the kids hanging out at Sanborn School. You go through there in the morning and there's broken beer bottles, there's beer cans, it's a danger," says Police Sgt. John Pathiakakis. "It's a playground for little kids. Parents take their kids there and they're complaining."

"I told my (officers) tonight, if there's any kids out there, we're going to put a stop to it."

Pathiakakis says that when police went to the school shortly after 10 p.m., they found a large gathering of mostly Andover kids.

He says the officers couldn't possibly have arrested all of the kids, so they picked four. One of the teen-agers, an Atkinson, N.H. male, was celebrating his 18th birthday Tuesday. The other three males were Andover residents. All four were charged with trespassing.

Those arrested were Daniel R. Borowiecki, 18, of 16 Amberwood Road, Atkinson, N.H.; and Corey P. Zalewski, 17, of 231 Highland Road; Christopher J. Cuomo, 77 Central St.; and Mark W. Stout, 19, of 13 Alderbrook Road, all of Andover.

Pathiakakis says the four did not do anything significantly different from the other youth to warrant arrest.

But he says all of the kids were guilty of trespassing, and that police have warned youths about this in the past. He says there are signs posted at Andover schools, that people should not trespass on school grounds from 9 p.m. to 5 a.m.

"There were 100 kids. It's not practical (to arrest everyone). There's no way you can book 100 kids. It took us one and a half hours just for four of them," says Pathiakakis.

In the parking lot where the youth had gathered, police found two bags of marijuana, beer bottles and cans and a carbon dioxide inhaler, says Pathiakakis.

"This is just the stuff I picked up in the parking lot. This is what the 5- and 6-year-olds were going to see the next morning," he says.

Pathiakakis indicated police will continue to patrol school and town locations to prevent large gatherings.

"This will be ongoing. We understand they're youths. The kids need a place to hang out. We understand that," he says. "Ten kids can go out and play basketball at that school and no one will bother them."

But Pathiakakis says that when several dozen gather, it creates a problem for neighbors that the police plan to address.

Parents at the station after midnight to pick up their children seemed to have a mixed reaction to the arrests. One mother slapped her son's face while another father told police he didn't feel his son "was guilty of anything other than being a kid in Andover," says Pathiakakis.

Splashing to an Olympic dream

By Joe Vieira

Connie Brown will head out to Minnesota this weekend with dreams of the 2004 Olympics in her mind. But the 14-year-old Andover resident could also be competing for a spot on the Olympic team in 2000.

Brown has already qualified for the Olympic time trials in Indianapolis next August, in the 100-meter butterfly race, and this weekend will attempt to qualify for the 100- and 200-meter freestyle races.

"I don't know what my chances are of winning any of the time trials," she says, discussing the events that could win her a slot on the Olympic team in Sydney, Australia. "There are going to be about five or six girls that are faster than me (in Minnesota), so I am just going to see what I can do against them."

Brown adds that she is not going to put herself under any pressure to qualify for more time trials this weekend, or to qualify for the Olympic team at next year's time trials either. Instead she intends to use the experience as preparation for a serious run at the Olympics in 2004.

Preparation for the field that she will face at the time trials has already begun for Brown, who defeated Olympian Barbara Bedford when she qualified for the 100-meter butterfly time trial with a time of 1:02.51.

"It felt really good," says Brown of defeating an Olympian. "We don't really get to race them (Olympians) too often, so it was exciting to see what I could do against her."

As for intensifying her workouts, Brown says that she will start some double sessions, but will mostly stick to her usual routine, which can involve swimming up to 6,500 yards in a day.

Despite her desire to use the 2000 Olympic trials as a maturing experience, Brown would naturally love a shot at Olympic gold, especially in the 100- and 200-meter freestyle races.

While she is eager to qualify in the freestyle races, Brown's favorite race is the butterfly, for which she holds the 10- and under National 50-meter record, as well as the New England Junior National 100-meter record.

A love of butterflies attracted Brown to the race style when she was a child. She happened to have a natural ability in the stroke that has flourished in the last few years.

Brown began swimming with her aunt when she was 6, and soon was swimming competitively. When she was 8, her uncle, Mike Spring, took over as her coach, and has helped her develop.

Despite her preparation against Olympians in the past, Brown says the thought of racing in the time trials next year can still be intimidating.

"I have already swum against some of the girls who will be there, so it will be really exciting," she says. "But it will also be scary."

Two-wheeled journey across sun-baked Iowa continues

A small contingent of Andover residents traveled to Iowa last week to participate in RAGBRAI — the Register's Annual Great Bike Ride Across Iowa — started by a couple of columnists for the Des Moines Register and now in its 27th year.

Townsmen Editor Taylor Armerding rode for the first four days with the local participants — Lori Becker, Bill Pennington, Ken Shapiro and George Skaliotis. His report on getting out to the start, and the first three days of the ride, appeared in last week's edition. It is still available on the Townsman Web site at www.andovertownsman.com

This report covers his final day on the trip.

Day 4: Clear Lake to Waverly

Wednesday actually starts a little ahead of time, just before midnight Tuesday, when the nearly full moon is blotted out by clouds, lightning flashes across the sky and powerful gusts of wind start making tent poles groan.

Moments later, a police cruiser siren wails, and some garbled words come through the speakers on the top of the car. We can't understand them, but the message is clear enough. A moment later, a couple of people from the support vehicles are running through the camp.

"Get up, get your bikes in your tents, and get over to the garage," one of them shouts. "There's a tornado warning."

The reactions are as different as the riding costumes. For some, it is a time for moderate panic. For others, it's just one more interruption of a desperately needed night's

A protein breakfast — Ken Shapiro, Bill Pennington, Taylor Armerding and fellow rider Sam, from Connecticut, surround Mr. Pork Chop.

And it ends up being the latter. There is heavy rain for about 10 minutes, and abundant lightning, but no serious wind, and certainly no tornado. We wander sleepily back to our tents and try once again to doze in the stifling humidity.

So it's nice of Ken Shapiro, who says he likes to start early — "by first light, around 5:30" — to agree to sleep in an extra half hour.

He's supposed to meet some in-laws in Greene anyway, about 55 miles into the day's trip. So it won't do him all that much good to show up at 10 or so.

Still, since we don't get on the road until after 6:15, he says it feels a bit weird to be starting so much further back in the pack than he usually does.

Shapiro, who runs a couple of McDonald's restaurants in the area, clearly has good people skills, which are effortlessly applied to the ride. Pennington, who is riding with us, is good at chatting people up, but so is Shapiro, who says more "Good Mornings" during the first half hour than anyone within earshot. He also breaks the news that it's Pennington's birthday, and leads the surrounding riders in a ragged chorus of the song.

He also likes to have fun with the locals, who tend to sit on their lawns by the road and shout to riders, "Where you from?"

Shapiro beats them to it. "Where you from?" he asks family after family.

They look at him as if he's nuts, which of course he is.

This is Shapiro's third RAGBRAI, so he also has a sense of what HAS to be experienced. And when he hears this matter and hopefully we can have some kind of recourse in this matter. The Board of Selectmen would not listen about our concerns and had their minds already made up," Cataldo wrote.

She says the company will also be storing hazardous waste.

"I am also concerned with toxic waste, in which they stated they do not have any. They will recycle everything. I have read a lot of information, and some of these materials are not recyclable," she wrote.

Roger Woodhull, vice president of operations for California Products, Inc., says the company has used a manufacturing method since 1996 that puts all of its industrial waste back into its products.

"Our process is completely self-contained," he says.

The company is required to apply for a permit to generate hazardous waste, he says, because if an accident occurs that triggers the sprinkler system and some waste could not be recycled, the company would need a waste generating permit to have the material shipped off the site.

"We worked very hard to get to the point where we don't generate hazardous waste," he says.

A permit for flammables issued by selectmen can be appealed "on the grounds that the exercise thereof would constitute a fire or explosion hazard," according to Massachusetts General Laws. If a hearing is granted, it would be held to "finally determine whether such a hazard would result," the law says.

Cataldo says she is concerned that Andover's Fire Department is not equipped to handle the kind of fire that would occur if chemicals at the proposed paint plant ignited.

Andover Fire Chief Harold Wright says the chemicals that would be used at California Products, Inc., are relatively safe compared to those used by other companies already operating in town.

RAGBRAI ...

that I have yet to eat from Mr. Pork Chop, that becomes one of the main missions of the morning. He doesn't even want to stop for the usual pancake ritual. "You'll be too full for a pork chop," he says, even though Mr. Pork Chop's location for the day is 38 miles into the route. I'm thinking this is going to be a late breakfast.

But this is also the only day so far that there is a fairly consistent tailwind. After struggling to maintain an average of perhaps 17 mph most of the earlier days, it is exhilarating to look down at the speedometer and realize it's taking half the effort to go about 23 or 24. This, we could do all day.

And this brings us to Mr. Pork Chop before 9 a.m., where the grille is already roasting chops that are at least twice as thick as those skinny, wimpy things on the meat shelf at the local grocery store. Mr. PC, whose business card says his real name is Paul Bernhard (he delivers "pork gift packages" all over the country — just call his 800 number) doesn't even make a sandwich out of it. The meat is big and impressive enough all on its own. You just shake on a little salt and start chewing.

While we eat, Shapiro sits and talks to the family members who are hosting Mr. PC's site for the day. We all try to figure out how much he's making, at $5 a chop. We all figure it's a lot, for a week's work.

Today is also the day that the route includes an extra 25-mile loop for those who want to say they did 100 miles at least one of the days. Pennington and Shapiro decide to take it, while I'm too anxious about how I'm going to get back to Des Moines, since I have to leave the ride and return to the day job by Friday morning.

So for the first time of the week, I'm riding on my own. I make sure, however, to try one more of Shapiro's recommendations — a smoothie — which is a pureed mix of concentrated fruit juice and ice.

That gives me a chance to meet yet another of the locals — one Jacob Levi Spratt, age 8, whose parents sell me a strawberry/banana smoothie, and who sits next to me and asks a series of questions including, "Would you like to meet our dog? Would you like to swim in our pond? Which bike is yours? Do you want me to get it ready for you?"

I press on, through Greene and Clarksville, where the temperature has topped 100 degrees, the humidity is almost as high, and there are signs of the flooding that put Waverly on the map just a week earlier. The roads are dry, but in some places, the fields are still oceans of muck.

When Waverly finally does appear, I'm just as glad I didn't attempt the 100 miles. I'm finally to the point where, I have to admit, I'm simply too hot. I have never been so hot, not even during basic training at Ft. Benning, Ga. I am ready to do almost anything to avoid getting any hotter.

So for people who think there is only one good reason for a cold shower, here is another — a RAGBRAI day like today. At the campsite, I grab the hose, hold it over my head and turn it on. I guess it's impossible to feel that good, unless you've felt that bad. I do that every half hour until the sun goes down.

Just a reminder — In case there was any doubt about the activity of the week, even the flower arrangements on the table at a local church in Rock Rapids, Iowa, featured a bike.

Epilogue

Thursday morning I'm up with the crowd, even though they're riding and I'm not. This is supposed to be the first truly tough day of the ride, at 90 miles and some fairly serious hills on the way to Decorah. I'm feeling vaguely guilty.

By 7:30, mine is the only tent in the field. By 8, the trucks are gone. I'm feeling vaguely disoriented.

By 10, I'm on the road to Des Moines, driving a car on a highway, with the air conditioning on. I'm doing 65 with no effort and no sweat.

Now the guilt is more pronounced. In spite of the killer heat, I'm wishing I were pedaling to Decorah. And I'm already trying to figure out a way that I can do the whole thing next year.

Two hearings on Powder Mill Square are continued

By Rebecca Lipchitz

A proposed housing and office building development that includes a unique drainage and sewer system, plus a reconfiguring of traffic lights, is now in the "complicated cases" category for the Planning Board.

The planners scheduled a special meeting to discuss the Powder Mill Square project, proposed for Shawsheen Square across from the Stevens Street post office.

At last Tuesday's meeting, the second public hearing on the project, which proposes a combination of private housing for elderly and a medical office buildings, was continued to Sept. 14 to allow developers time to address concerns.

"Although it's a complex project, we know what the issues are," says Tom Laudani of the developer, Northpoint Development Corp.

More than a dozen residents turned out to tell planners what they felt the issues were:

traffic in Shawsheen Square, drainage of the sewer system in the flood plain, access for residents of homes along North Main Street, and the moving expenses of a couple who rent an apartment that would be torn down to make way for the project.

Developers told Anthony Mattola his right-of-way would be preserved, and the project would not change the access to his driveway.

"I've had this right-of-way for 30 years," he told the audience, holding a piece of paper up over his head.

Other neighbors of North Main Street at the meeting said they were concerned about being able to access the parking lot behind their homes.

Developer Lou Minicucci says he thinks residents are worried about their driveways because there was no written provision to guarantee they would stay, but he now plans to provide assurance in writing.

One resident says he is concerned about the impact of traffic on the neighborhood, and estimated from the developer's reports that traffic would increase 20 percent.

Dermott Kelley, traffic engineer for the project, says traffic on Stevens Street would increase 2.9 percent, and he expects the backups near the post office to be reduced by the addition of a turning lane as part of the project.

One resident says he thinks traffic won't improve because the project would eliminate a parking lot used by post office employees, forcing them to take up the parking spaces for post office customers.

Planning Director Steve Colyer says no one from the post office has spoken with the Planning Department about the project so far, but his department would make an effort to reach them.

The Conservation Commission, which met Tuesday night, continued its hearing on the project to Aug. 17.

Anthony's brother, who was also in the water, lifted the boy and Burnett saw that the 3-year-old "was completely limp."

So, while fellow lifeguard Katya Yerozolimsky ran to call 911, Burnett ran into the water.

He put Anthony on a surfboard the lifeguards call a "shark," and saw that he was not breathing. He also learned the boy had not suffered any kind of head or body injury to knock him unconscious.

But once he got the toddler out of the water, Burnett heard some gurgling.

"There was water in his lungs, but he was breathing a little bit," he says. "He was unconscious, and needed a little help."

Burnett, a Boy Scout working on his Eagle Scout project, gave him that help by tilting his head, and took care of the boy while he coughed up water and vomited. Later, emergency personnel congratulated Burnett on what he had done. Burnett says he wants to give credit to all of the lifeguards who do the same job he does.

"It feels good, but it wasn't all me," he says. "It was everybody put together. If that ambulance didn't come as fast as it did, or our other lifeguard didn't respond as fast as she did, who knows what would have happened?"

Burnett has been a lifeguard for three summers, but this is his first summer at Poms Pond. He says he's never been involved with anything like a drowning.

"Nothing like this. I've been in the water to help out tired swimmers getting back, but nothing like this," he says.

Before this summer, he had just been recertified for both lifeguard training and CPR for professional rescue he says.

"The only reason you do through the recertification is to refresh your memory," he says. "You always came to the job and wonder, 'Will I remember everything?' When I pulled that kid out of the water, I didn't forget anything."

Burnett says that every day he and his fellow lifeguards go through the same routine. They come and open up the park, clean up the beach from the night before and put out the boats. But Saturday will always be special, says Burnett.

"That day will stand out for the rest of my life. It's just something that stays with you for a while, when you save someone's life," he says. "I was really shook up after the rescue. It was just the adrenaline wearing off."

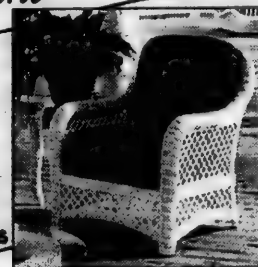

Now, both he and little Anthony seem as if they'll be just fine.

Saturday night, after the pond closed, Burnett went to the hospital to check on Anthony. The father thanked him, he says, and (eventually) so did the nurses.

"They wanted to know who I was and they gave me a bit of attitude," he says with a smile. "But once they knew who I was, they (congratulated) me."

Short cuts

Come on in

Whether you're new to town or just looking for a new social group, it may be time to go clubbing.

Specifically, it may be time to check out the Newcomers Club of the Andovers.

Member Dawn Kraskey calls the group, "an instant social life."

And, in spite of the name, the group is open to all Andover and North Andover residents, no matter how long they've lived in town.

"You don't even have to be a newcomer to join. If you're interested in meeting new people, you're welcome to join," says Kraskey.

"In fact, it's nice to have some of the 'old timers' in it, because when you're new to town, you're looking for painters and electricians, and it's nice to have someone who can point you in the right direction."

The Newcomers Club has several groups that meet for different reasons. A "Moms and Tots" group is popular with mothers (and dads) who just moved to Andover, while others find joining the club's wine-tasting and beer-tasting groups easy to swallow.

Still others flock to a group for empty nesters.

Kraskey, who says she's moved a lot over the years, swears by such newcomer groups. In fact, she says one of the things she liked about Andover was that it had such a group.

"It's a wonderful plus for Andover," she says. "It's a life saver when you're new in town."

A meeting for newcomers is slated for Aug. 25, and Andover residents looking for more info can call Kraskey at 749-9558.

Youth theater groups stage first shows

By Neil Fater

Theater goers looking for something new to do can see the premier performances of two original youth theater groups during the next week.

First, the Summer Theater Ensemble, a group of actors in grades 7 to 10, will invite people on a theatrical trip to the islands this Friday and Saturday, Aug. 6 and 7.

Curtains will open for both performances of the musical Once on this Island at 7:30 p.m. in the Collins Center at Andover High. Once on this Island is a musical that takes Hans Christian Andersen's The Little Mermaid and delivers it with a tropical twist. Tickets are $3.

If that's not enough, Wednesday, Aug. 11, an Andover Youth Services group will perform the first ever installment of what they hope will be an annual "Shakespeare in the Skate Park" event. The group will perform A Midsummer Night's Dream at the skate park, for free, with youth on skateboards and in-line skates playing the fairies.

Island dreamin'

The Summer Theater Ensemble was created by Andover teachers Terri Scullen and Elly Seavey as an outgrowth of their The Children's Studio, which is for younger children.

After young actors were too old for The Children's Studio, they were still asking to be involved, says Seavey.

"So we felt the middle school area was a good time to get children more involved," she says.

"Specifically in drama, this definitely fills a gap," says 14-year-old Jeff Kane, who plays Daniel, a rich lover and a lead part in the musical. "The opportunity to work with a professional director (Bob Vernon) is probably better than you'll get anywhere else."

But Jeff's reason for acting is basic.

"It just feels right on stage. You're in a world that just feels OK and correct. People ask me if it's the applause and attention and it's not. It's really about expressing oneself through another person who's imaginary."

"It's an art form. Why does a painter paint?" says Jeff. "Plus, it's fun."

Wheelin'

"Fun" is also important to Shakespeare director Faran Krentcil, a recent Phillips Academy grad. She says she has cast actors and skaters who bring talent to the stage - and also energy.

"I always want to do plays because it makes me very happy," says Carrie English, one of the key players and says he auditioned for the play because "It was a unique thing, Shakespeare in the skate park. No one does that."

Daniel Villarreal Serna, a Doherty Middle School student,

But while one might think that putting the bard's characters on boards would be difficult for a young director to coordinate, Krentcil says that's not the case.

"That part was easy," she says. "The hardest part was working with an outdoor stage. But we're actually lucky the skate park has all sorts of shapes we can use."

Krentcil says she'll use the shapes as a stage that will provide the audience with something familiar.

"Shakespeare is very obscure to a lot of people. The minute they hear it, their mind immediately shuts off," she says. "By putting it in a place (the audience) can relate to, you're making it more accessible."

Wednesday's performance will be free. Those coming to sit and watch may want to bring blankets to

Your Dental HEALTH

by Richard D. Hopgood, D.M.D., F.A.G.D.

GETTING TO THE ROOT

One of the biggest misconceptions to befall dentistry concerns the idea that root canal (endodontic) treatment is painful. The fact is that the pain associated with the root canal is due to the infection that makes the procedure necessary. Root canal treatment, itself, is virtually painless. Patients receive local anesthetic that numbs all of the sensitive tissue before the procedure even begins. In short, root canal treatment stops pain. It does not cause it. Endodontic treatment involves the removal of the pulp, which is the soft tissue (including the nerve) inside the tooth that runs from the crown through the roots. Treatment also includes filling the vacant space, once the soft tissue is removed.

Pain is the body's way of saying something is wrong. When you ignore pain, you also ignore the underlying problem, and relief slips farther and farther away. Be smart! For professional dental care, including advice on root canal treatment or any other oral concern, from a caring staff committed to your comfort and well-being, call or visit us at 296 Lowell Street, Rt 133, with easy access off Rt 93. PH: 475-2431. Our success is measured by the extent of your happy smile.

P.S. Root canal treatment helps make it possible to save teeth, which is the primary objective of dentistry.

The Andover-Scotland connection

In the photo at right, Elizabeth Murdoch of Brechin, Scotland, receives a painting of the bandstand in the Park from Buzz Stapczynski, town manager. Murdoch taught for many years at the Andover School in Brechin, Scotland, and wrote a history of the school, which had been founded by Peter and John Smith.

The Smith brothers and John Dove left Brechin in the 1800s and came to Andover and made their fortune in the flax mills. On a return visit to Brechin, they financed the building of a new elementary school and named it after their beloved Andover in Massachusetts.

A brand new Andover primary school was recently completed and in searching for descendants of the Smiths, Murdoch and others discovered that Pam Awtrey, a reference librarian at Memorial Hall Library (financed by John Smith) was the great, great-great-granddaughter of Peter Smith. Awtrey and her husband flew to Brechin for the dedication of the new school.

It was Murdoch's first visit to the States and while here she spent a week in Newton with the Awtreys, a week in New Hampshire with her friend Phyllis Howard, and a week in Andover with her friend Elaine J. Schofield.

One of the highlights of her time in Andover was a luncheon at the Andover Inn given by the Awtreys, which included several town representatives and friends.

Chamber prez Bevilacqua honored by SCORE

Merrimack Valley Chamber of Commerce President/CEO Joseph J. Bevilacqua was presented with a special award from SCORE: The Service Corps of Retired Executives at the Chamber's 1999 Small Business Day awards ceremony.

The award was presented "...in grateful acknowledgement of important public service rendered unselfishly and providing exemplary service to the small business community."

Bevilacqua has led the Chamber as its membership has grown from about 400 members in 1992 to more than 1,000 members today, making the Merrimack Valley Chamber the largest, most effective chamber in the Merrimack Valley. President Bill Clinton, Congressman Martin Meehan, Governor Paul Cellucci and others have recognized Bevilacqua for his work.

Bevilacqua said the receipt of this award is a direct reflection of the board of directors and membership of the Merrimack Valley Chamber of Commerce. "I am honored to have been presented with this award from SCORE, who serves as the nation's business counselor for small business," he said.

The award was from the national president of the SCORE Association, which is sponsored by the U.S. Small Business Administration.

Swim school keeps kids afloat

A number of backyard pools in Andover are serving as more than a place to simply kick back after work and sip a margarita.

Several days a week, they have been serving as a swimming school, conducted by Pool School Plus.

Co-founders Nanc Dumond and Lynn Tilley launched the business last September, with a system of Learn-to-Swim lessons that may not immediately seem out of the ordinary.

However, upon closer scrutiny, an observer might ask, "Where are the bubbles?"

Pool School Plus doesn't use the standard flotation bubbles common to most swim classes. Dumond, whose dream of starting a swim school began in her backyard pool 10 years ago, models her program on the philosophy of the National Swim School Association. She developed a program of 20 swim levels to teach children starting at 6 months of age, without the bubbles.

The theory is that if children are introduced to the water in a fun but gentle manner, they will soon become comfortable under the water.

Dumond says she has taught 2-year-olds to swim in 10 feet of water, so she knows this method works and is quick enough for the short New England summer swimming season.

In the classes, children learn to swim with their faces in the water first through games.

"They don't even realize they are learning water skills while they are playing zany games," Dumond says, adding that even reluctant children are soon freely submerging their heads.

Tilley, who says the two have been working in as many as 15 Andover backyards "all summer," says the youngest age for those classes is about 3, but that they do work with babies at some of their inside pools.

She says the ratio of students to instructors is about 4:1, and that if a child comes to classes ready to learn, with no fear of the water, "we're able to get them doggie paddling" within the eight-lesson course. Each class lasts about 45 minutes.

Things proceed a bit more slowly, she says, if the children come with fear of the water or separation anxiety. "But we tend to take our cues from the parents," she says, "and just let the children go at their own pace."

She says the games, which feature things like puppets and Hula Hoops, make the kids forget that their faces are going under the water.

Those things, she says, can help conquer fears. "One kid is swimming beautifully now, after being very afraid of the water. Once he got over the fear, now it's his favorite thing," she says.

Dumond and Tilley attended week-

A leap of faith — Rachel Corraera (above) takes a jump into the water of her very own backyard pool on Fairfax Drive, as part of the Pool School Plus class, attended by children from several local families. long conferences sponsored by the NSSA in Palm Springs, Calif., Tempe, Ariz., Dallas, Texas and Fort Lauderdale, Fla., to prepare for their venture. Dumond attended all the in-water sessions while Tilley focused on the business aspect.

Formerly of Northmeadow Health & Racquet Club, the two decided to launch the school, gearing the program to preschoolers, partially because drowning is the leading cause of death for children younger than 5.

Because pool temperature is also a critical component for small children, they found a 90-degree therapy pool at Therafit on Walker Street in Lowell.

Cool pool temperatures haven't been much of an issue this summer, with a succession of heat waves, but Tilley says it helps to have the warm water available. "If you've got a little child who's crying and cold, it makes a difference," she says.

The school also focuses on safety, with a five-minute lecture at the beginning of each class based on the Red Cross Whales Tales program. The series of talks takes the child from

"Look Before You Leap" to "Don't Just Pack it, Wear Your Jacket." Preschoolers even have "homework" that accompanies each safety lesson.

On "Graduation Day" swimmers must venture through "Alligator Alley" then jump into the alligator's mouth before receiving their certificates outlining their specific accomplishments in the water.

After building the business over the winter, Dumond and Tilley expanded their lessons to other age levels, and expanded their locations to four facilities and various backyard pool sites, including more than a dozen in Andover.

Besides Therafit, they now operate out of N.E. Rehab Hospital in Salem, N.H., New England Tennis in Middleton and Rolling Ridge in North Andover. The eight-lesson courses are held Monday through Thursday for two weeks, or Tuesday and Thursday for four weeks, or just Fridays or Saturdays for eight weeks. Private and semi-private lessons are also available.

For further information, call Tilley at 690-4288 or Dumond at (978) 851-5022.

He helps couples to understand that each person has their own unique way of problem solving and that this needs to be recognized and welcomed with respect by the other.

Many couples often come

TEWKSBURY — The 1999 summer odyssey continues for the Andover American Major 11-12 Little League All-Stars, who qualified for this weekend's four-team Massachusetts State Tournament with recent victories over Stoneham American and Danvers National.

District 14 champion Andover American swept past District 13 titlist Stoneham American in a tightly-contested best-of-3 bi-district series.

Andover won the opening game at Tewksbury's Poulin Field, 6-4 in nine innings. The second game at Weafer Park in Woburn, which was interrupted by rain and took two nights to complete, also went to Andover 6-5.

The locals then returned to Poulin for a hard-fought 4-2 elimination victory over District 15 champ Danvers in sectional action.

The magical mystery tour resumes when undefeated Andover American (8-0) opens play in the single-elimination State Tournament tomorrow evening at Ronnie Bachond Memorial Field in Leominster.

Andover plays the opening game at 5 p.m. against Norwood National, the Section 4 champ (Districts 9-10-11-12), while the second semifinal between Easthampton and Middleboro will follow at 8 o'clock.

If Andover wins its semifinal the locals will compete for the state title on Saturday at 2 p.m. against the Easthampton/Middleboro winner.

A loss means a tournament-ending consolation game Saturday morning at 10:30.

The Andover players and coaches, with the option of staying with host families in Leominster for the weekend, will instead remain together in a motel.

The Massachusetts champ qualifies for the 12-team Eastern Regionals in Bristol, Conn., and the regional winner goes to the Little League World Series in Williamsport, Pa. the third week of August.

In 1988, the Andover Nationals became one of the few Massachusetts teams ever to make it all the way to Williamsport.

That A-N squad was led by Rick Saggese, Toby Guzowski, Todd Harris, Paul Allard, Brian Flanagan and Matt Wolcott and was coached by Jim Arnold, John Murphy and Red Harris.

Andover American is the first District 14 Major 11-12 Division champ to qualify for the State Tournament since Lowell Callery did it in 1993.

Callery then beat Parkway of West Roxbury, 4-0, in the semifinals before losing to Middleboro, 3-1, in the title game.

Middleboro also won the Regionals and played in Williamsport.

"A lot of kids have played well for us to get this far," said Andover manager Dan Hughes. "We've been able to scratch for runs, score at crucial times and, for the most part, play excellent defense."

"We keep finding ways to win," continued Hughes. "Each of our last four games has been close, and we've managed to come up with a big hit or defensive play or pitching performance to pull it out."

"This should help us at the State Tournament. Our kids are battle-tested in tough situations. We've been there and done that in the close games — and success builds confidence," said Hughes.

"Most teams we've played have been bigger than us physically. But we're quick and we make things happen on the bases, which puts pressure on the other team's defense."

"We're making it an interesting summer for quite a few people. Even some without kids on the team are beginning to read the scores and follow our progress. We had people from Tewksbury and Chelmsford watching our practices this week."

"Hopefully we can keep it going this weekend in Leominster."

Shaun Hannigan (3-0) is expected to start tomorrow night's semifinal, although Tim Hughes (3-0) will get the call if his arm feels good.

"I doubt we'll pitch Tim on three days rest but we won't rule out the possibility either," said coach Hughes.

Craig Lanciani, Matt Renfro and Tom Arrigg are also capable pitchers if needed.

SECTIONAL GAME Andover American 4 Danvers National 2

The locals pecked away for a 4-0 lead after three innings, and then hung tough as Danvers scored single runs in the fourth and sixth.

Danvers had the tying runs on base when the game ended.

"There were a few anxious moments in the late innings, but once again our kids did what was needed to win," said coach Hughes.

Winning pitcher Tim Hughes (3-0) scattered eight Danvers National hits over six innings, striking out seven and walking five.

The locals took a 1-0 first inning lead, loading the bases on a walk to offensive catalyst Matt Renfro, bunt single by Shaun Hannigan and walk to Hughes.

Craig Lanciani then lofted a one-out sacrifice fly to left-center field on a 3-2 pitch.

In the second Tom White was plunked on the helmet by a pitch (he was not hurt). He alertly moved to third on Zach O'Donnell's sacrifice bunt, taking the extra base when Danvers failed to cover the bag, and beat the pitcher's scoop throw to home on a two-out bunt single by Renfro.

Hannigan then beat out a bunt single and Hughes walked again, loading the bases for Matt Hennessy who grounded a single to center, scoring Renfro for a 3-0 lead.

In the Andover third, Lanciani drew a leadoff walk and Matt Iorio singled to right. With two outs Tom Arrigg walked to load the bases, and Renfro walked to force home the final Andover run.

Danvers got on the board in the fourth on a double steal. "I think those were the first stolen bases we've allowed in the tournament,"

The game started out like a slugfest, with each team scoring three runs in the first inning before both pitchers settled down.

It was still 3-3 after the regulation six innings, and both teams scored once in the seventh before Andover finally broke the tie for good in the ninth.

Both pitchers went nine innings for the first time in their baseball careers.

Winner Tim Hughes yielded only five hits and one earned run, striking out 10, walking four and throwing 113 pitches.

Stoneham righthander Dom Previte allowed 11 hits and five earned runs while issuing 10 walks and whiffing six.

Andover jumped ahead 3-0 when the first three batters of the game reached safely.

Rally-igniter Matt Renfro walked, Hannigan singled to right and Hughes belted a three-run homer to center field. It was Hughes' first tournament homer.

Hughes did not see another pitch to hit all night as Previte walked him five straight times.

Stoneham tied the game in the bottom of the inning when its top four batters also reached safely.

A leadoff single by Andy Hill, followed by consecutive errors on balls hit by Previte and Bobby Mercer, loaded the bases for catcher Aaron Feinberg. The big lefty drilled a double up the gap to clear the bases and make it 3-3.

Craig Lanciani broke the deadlock with a solo homer to center field in the seventh. It was his first of the tourney.

Stoneham bounced right back with a run in the bottom half of the seventh, and had the bases loaded with one out and a 2-1 count of the batter.

Hughes then fired a wild pitch that glanced off catcher Andrew Hennessy and rolled 25 feet into foul territory on the first base side.

The Stoneham player at third, representing the winning run, had a moment of indecision and broke late for the plate. It was enough time for Hennessy to retrieve the ball and fire to Hughes covering the plate.

Hughes slapped on the tag for the second out, preventing a Stoneham win, and a comebacker to the mound two pitches later enabled him to escape a major jam.

Andrew Hennessy opened the Andover ninth by reaching on an infield error, and Tom White followed with a bunt single.

That set the stage for Arrigg's clutch RBI double to left-center rescuing Hennessy.

Renfro skied deep to center field, and Stoneham outfielder Andy Hill made a perfect one-hop throw to home nailing the runner trying to tag and score from third.

Hannigan then grounded an RBI single up the middle to plate Arrigg with the final run.

Stoneham did not threaten in the bottom of the inning.

Arrigg was 3-for-3 with a double and two singles, while Hannigan also had three hits to pace the attack.

Hill finished with a double and single for Stoneham.

Defensively, Andover had fine plays from infielders Matt Hennessy (diving catch of a line drive at first base), 11-year-old shortstop Zach O'Donnell and second baseman Matt Iorio.

Stoneham shortstop Bob Sargent stabbed two sharp line drives and Hill was a defensive standout in center.

Andover American 6 Stoneham 5

Andover, losing the flip for home team again, took another 3-0 lead in the top of the first and broke a 4-4 tie in the fourth inning on a bases-loaded walk to Craig Lanciani and run-scoring passed ball.

The game was halted by thunderstorms in the middle of the fourth inning, and the teams reconvened at Weafer Field in Woburn the following morning to play the final 2 1/2 innings.

Righthander Shaun Hannigan (3-0) was the winning pitcher, tossing a complete-game seven-hitter with nine strikeouts.

For the second straight game Hannigan did not walk a batter and struck out nine. In 17 tournament innings he has walked only three and fanned 24.

Stoneham righty Ryan Walsh allowed six hits and whiffed seven, but 10 walks led to his downfall.

The locals scored three runs in the first even though hitting the ball out of the infield only once.

Leadoff batter Matt Renfro beat out a bunt single, Hannigan singled to right and Hughes walked to load the bases.

Tom Arrigg, batting cleanup after his 3-for-3 effort the previous game, and Matt Hennessy both walked to force home two runs. The next two batters struck out before Tom White drew another walk to make it 3-0.

Stoneham chipped away with single runs in the first and second innings, but Matt Hennessy belted a solo homer (second of tourney) in the third to give Andover a 4-2 lead.

Bobby Mercer's two-run homer in the bottom of the stanza tied it, but Andover responded with two runs in the fourth.

Renfro singled to left, Hannigan bunted him to second, Hughes walked and Andrew Hennessy walked to load the bases. Another free pass to Craig Lanciani forced in a run, and Hughes raced across with the eventual game-winner on a passed ball.

Stoneham scored its final run in the fifth, but went quickly and quietly in the sixth on a groundout to first baseman Matt Hennessy, a strikeout and a popout to second baseman Matt Iorio, who made a fine running catch near the foul line.

Renfro led the six-hit attack with two safeties, while he and Hughes (1-for-1, three walks) scored two runs each.

Andy Hill had two hits and scored three runs, Mercer singled and homered, Aaron Feinberg had a pair of singles and two RBI, and Ryan Walsh clubbed a bases-empty homer for Stoneham.

Defensive standouts for Andover included centerfielder Renfro, who made a sliding catch, shortstop Zach O'Donnell, first baseman Matt Hennessy and Iorio.

Alumni squad takes current Legion crop to school, 6-0

By Rick Harrison

The inaugural Andover Post 8 American Legion alumni baseball game/cookout was a success, as the graduates whitewashed the 1999 Legion team 6-0 at the Andover High varsity field last weekend.

The alumni squad was comprised of 10 recent high school/Legion graduates who are all currently playing college baseball.

The talented group included infielders Brian Tisbert (UConn), Mark Langone (Stonehill), Scott Petersen (Holy Cross) and Steve Vickers (Bentley), outfielders Ben Gibson (Ithaca), Jason Caverly (Northern Essex) and Mark O'Sullivan (Rollins).

Pitcher Rob Busby

(Worcester Polytech), catcher Keith Grant (Stonehill) and Ted Payne (Duke) completed the squad.

Alex Marshall (Northern Essex) was also scheduled to play, but when the game was postponed a week because of thunderstorms he was unable to participate.

The 1999 Legion team was also missing several key players because of conflicts, that group including ace pitcher Mark Rocca, Josh Topp and Andy Salini.

Lefthander Busby, Langone and Tisbert divided the pitching chores for the alumni, while lefties Jeff Volinski, Kevin Shepard and Jason White did the pitching for the 1999 Legion.

Langone, one of the top players in the Northeast-10 Conference last spring, ignited the alumni offense with a ground-rule double, two singles and two RBI.

Caverly lashed an RBI double and run-scoring singles were contributed by Grant, Payne and O'Sullivan.

Eleventh-year manager Joe Iarrobino, a former Rollins College standout player, was pressed into action in the final inning and responded with a crisp stand-up double.

Iarrobino wore a helmet emblazoned with a starburst in the exact spot where he was struck by a line drive while pitching batting practice prior to a state tournament game two years ago.

"We had a nice crowd of kids and parents and everyone had a great time," said Iarrobino. "This is something we will do annually, bringing back the recent graduates who are playing college ball."

◀ The inaugural Andover Post 8 American Legion alumni baseball game was a rousing success, thanks to this group of Legion grads who returned to face this summer's Post 8 squad in a game at the Andover High varsity field. All of the players pictured are currently on college varsity rosters. Front row (from left): Brian Tisbert (UConn), Rob Busby (Worcester Polytech), Steve Vickers (Bentley), Keith Grant (Stonehill). Back row: Jason Caverly (Northern Essex), Ted Payne (Duke), Scott Petersen (Holy Cross), Legion manager Joe Iarrobino, Ben Gibson (Ithaca), Mark Langone (Stonehill) and Mark O'Sullivan (Rollins). The Alumni won the game, 6-0.

Andover's medal-winning athletes take part in annual Bay State Summer Games

By Rick Harrison

It took 11 days and featured over 5,000 athletes, 24 sports, hundreds of venues, 10,000 volunteers and spectators, 5,000 gallons of water, millions of whistles, thousands of medals and many proud faces.

From diving boards to balance beams, tennis courts to wrestling mats, amateur athletes of all ages, sizes and abilities from throughout Massachusetts showcased their abilities in the annual Bay State Summer Games, which came to a close this past Sunday.

The successes of many Andover athletes were chronicled in last week's Townsmen, and they were joined by many others whose sports were highlighted during the second week.

Those competing outdoors battled temperatures that hovered close to 100 degrees, and weathered a series of violent thunderstorms that temporarily halted some events.

Here are the final accomplishments of medal-winning athletes:

Kerry Nugent skated for the gold medal-winning Northeast Girls Scholastic Division ice hockey team.

Shirley Yacubowicz also earned first-place gold in the Junior Girls 10-12 years, 75-84 pound division of the judo competition.

Leon Fay took home the silver in the Junior Boys 13-16 years, 123-132 pound judo competition, while Evan Greer was also second in the Junior 13-16 lightweight division.

William Payne captured the bronze medal in the Men's 17-over white through green belt judo competition.

Rudy Morando earned a bronze medal in the Men's Open Division track and field javelin toss.

On the soccer field, Phil Ayoub, Ryan Rodriguez, Keith Selvitelli and Erik Dubasak helped the Open Men's Division 7-on-7 squad to a bronze medal.

Max and Sam Ball, Colin Huteler, Tyler Hyslip, Jason Sheldon, Greg Levis, Pami Maqubela, Pat Tonelli, Matt Wacks and Adam Rousmaniere were members of the silver medal-winning Cadet Boys Division 7-on-7 squad.

Emily Cummings, Michaela Iannazzi, Emilie Lantelme, Lauren Marsa, Lindsay Moramarco, Maria Nasta, Jaclyn Todisco, Julie Wadland, Jennifer Russell and Kerry Haugh earned second-place silver for the Cadet Girls 7-on-7 team.

The 1999 Dodge Caravan
Tom Manzi Dodge, Inc.

Since 1984, when Dodge first introduced the Caravan, it has been the "gold standard" for all other minivans to follow. Other manufacturers have tried to imitate the Caravan, but there is only one automotive original that continues to outsell its rivals - the Dodge Caravan.

The Caravan has been refined numerous times over the years offering extra room with space-saving cab-forward design. The extra room has easy access by including a standard second sliding door on the driver's side on almost every model, and the extra room is easy to use with Dodge's unique roll-out seats. The Caravan is engineered with a choice of four engines, and an available all-wheel drive system.

According to Consumer's Report, the Dodge Caravan consistently has been named again and again as one of the top 10 vehicles to buy. Tom Manzi Dodge is offering its customers a 1.9% financing program for 24 months when purchasing its Number One best seller. The dealership was voted the best place to purchase an automobile by the Greater Methuen/Lawrence's 3rd Annual Best Businesses For 1999. Their Number One attraction is surely customer satisfaction.

For more than 43 years, Tom Manzi

Dodge has been providing quality service and sales to the community bringing repeat customers back again to purchase a new or used car or truck. They also service Jeep/Eagle and Chrysler/Plymouth vehicles. They also have a large inventory of quality program vehicles for sale, all with factory warranties.

Tom Manzi Dodge is located at Merrimack Street and South Broadway in Lawrence. It is open seven days a week for sales. Service hours are Monday through Friday, 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday, 8 a.m. to noon. Telephone: (978) 683-9591.

ALL THOSE YEARS AGO

Bailey & Chase have finished up the concrete sidewalk on High Street.

William J. Burns has had a handsome new sign placed in position on the front of his tailoring establishment.

While cleaning a loaded revolver last Sunday, one of B.F. Holt's employees was accidentally shot in the hand. The wound was dressed by Dr. Abbott.

Do not forget the Flower Mission. The responses thus far to the call for flowers to be sent to the city have been most generous. Let the good work continue.

Frank P. Higgins had a large bug on exhibition at his store this week, armed with a beak, which was claimed to be a "kissing bug."

Letter-Carrier James Feeney is taking a week's vacation and during his absence Sub-Carrier Charles W. Richardson is covering his route.

A well-known gentleman in town has had an experience with a fly bite which was not entirely pleasant. A common house fly lighted upon a small scratch on the back of his hand and inflicted a bite therein. The victim's hand and arm became very much swollen. It is thought that the fly had probably come in contact previously with some decaying matter thus inoculating the wound with a poison through its touch.

Be sure to visit the Vacation School. There you will see the boys learning to make their own boxes, book cases and many other things; also to set up type and use a printing press with neatness and dispatch.

50 Years Ago

Daily records for gallonage at the pumping station have been broken several times during the two exceedingly dry months of June and July until a new high mark of 3,344,000 gallons was set for pumping July 29. The daily average for a year is about 1,700,000 gallons.

Motorists who drive with but one hand on the steering wheel and the other dangling out their window or sometimes about a fair companion are going to be stopped by enforcement officers of the registry of motor vehicles. Many serious accidents to other motorists, pedestrians, and offending drivers as well have been the direct result of this unsafe driving habit.

The Andover infirmary is a model for other small town infirmaries, writes Minna J. Detsch, district director of the state department of public welfare who, following an inspection here, commends Arthur W. Cole, local welfare agent, for the excellent administration and service extended to all.

The work of putting a hot-top on Main Street from the railroad bridge to the post office started Monday.

Final plans of the veterans housing development on Morton Street have been approved by the state housing board, Atty. Charles G. Hatch, chairman of the local housing authority has announced.

25 Years Ago

Due to the heavy increase in the number of complaints regarding the conduct of youths in The Park across from Memorial Auditorium, a special police patrol of the area has been instituted this week. The patrol resulted from the "complaints which have sky-rocketed" and in essence claiming that the group of 30 to 35 youths are exercising a takeover of the bandstand and park, according to Town Manager J. Maynard Austin.

Four veteran school bus drivers, who will be bidding against each other next Wednesday for one remaining bus route - and two who were awarded contracts last Thursday - were expected to be at a hearing into the school committee's bidding practices. The drivers are seeking to have seven contracts awarded July 16 and the two last week thrown out and 10 routes put up for rebid.

Andover's third elderly housing complex is soon to be under construction on North Main Street. The Andover Housing Authority met this past week to approve the contract for the Waltham firm, the lowest of 11 bidders.

Harry Steven Westcott, with a brand new doctorate in his pocket, will report in Monday as Andover's new associate superintendent of schools. Westcott was hired by the school committee last Thursday to fill the position it created this spring, and will receive a $25,000 salary.

10 Years Ago

After a June 20th School Committee meeting that went into the late hours of the night, committeeman Richard Hubbell sent a three-page memo reprimanding his colleagues for their lack of pre-meeting preparation. Mr. Hubbell said the memo appeared in The Lawrence Eagle-Tribune along with a response and more committee criticism from member Michael Frishman.

There is no doubt that the budget cuts at the state level will be felt by the Andover School Department. But how quickly the ax will fall and in what ways the cuts will affect the school administration, personnel and educational programs is what remains to be seen. In all, the town is expected to lose almost $1 million in state aid. The School Department anticipates being out as much as $560,000 in state funds.

If you've been to the North Main Street McDonald's lately you may have noticed a few changes. New trash bins are labeled "Recyclable Plastics Only Please" and "Non-Plastic Please." The Andover restaurant was chosen recently along with three other McDonald's in the Northeast to participate in a pilot plastics-recycling program.

Village Garden Club provides floral landscaping at the Senior Center

Two years ago, Kathy Urquhardt, director of Day Care at the Senior Center, approached Vicki Coderre, then president of the Village Garden Club of Andover, with the idea of a flower garden replacing their vegetable garden so the day care people (and everyone else) could enjoy flowers while sitting outside. The members of the Village Garden Club voted to start and maintain the garden and the photo (above right) shows the results of their work.

Each member has donated plants from their own gardens and has worked to maintain the new garden. The club strives to recycle plants and bulbs. The members voted to donate a garden bench last year and the seniors reportedly enjoy sitting under the tree.

This club has also done the plantings on Elm Green for a number of years, as well as donates table arrangements every month for the Bread & Roses kitchen in Lawrence, and in September will place flowers on the circulation desk along with the two other garden clubs in town.

Newcomers Club plans Aug. 25 social

The Newcomers Club of the Andovers will host a social Friday, Aug. 25, at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Tonna Vaccaro, treasurer to welcome both new and old members.

The Newcomers is a social club for residents of Andover and North Andover that features a variety of activities from bridge, sports, crafts and cooking to children's play groups, couple activities, beer and wine tasting, international group, ladies night and more. Membership is open to new and established residents.

Dennis' Beauty Shoppe

Dennis' Beauty Shoppe in North Andover has been providing quality hair care for 27 years. This quaint shop sketched above has been a hair salon for the past 40 years.

Owner Dennis Martin and his staff of Tracey Rabbito-Masson, Anne Henry, and George Kayajan offer styling, coloring, cuts, perms, waxing, and makeup consultations in a cozy, family-oriented salon nestled away off Osgood Street. They are very attentive to their customers and they all take that extra step to ensure that their customers look fabulous.

Hair color specialist Tracey Rabbito-Masson said customers are looking for a more natural look in hair color. Double processing (using a lighter than natural hair color for the entire hair with even lighter foiled highlights) creates a soft and natural look. Multi-dimensional highlighting using shades of blond and red also creates a natural sun-lightened look. For cuts, those with long hair are going with layers, but keeping it long, and short cuts have a messy, no-neatness look with lots of texture. Classic up-dos are the route for brides and attendants. For a new summer look, weddings, and back-to-school visit Dennis' Beauty Shoppe.

The shoppe caters to both men and women, with special rates to seniors and children under 12. Gift certificates are available. Located at 200 Osgood St., North Andover, Dennis' Beauty Shoppe keeps hours Tuesday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., Saturday, 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Telephone: (978) 683-2279. 8/5/99 Laurie Levy

Alternatives in medicine

By Michelle Eld

Hydrotherapy, massage, acu-puncture, Reiki - these sound like something you'd find at a day spa, a way to unwind and de-stress after a tough week, right? While these alternative medicine approaches can help you with stress, they, along with countless other techniques, have been found to have healing effects.

It's nearly impossible to come up with one definition to describe what alternative medicine is because it encompasses so many approaches to health care. But it can be best summed up as an array of techniques, modalities and medical systems that can act as an alternative or even as a complement to traditional health care. And, as with anything new or different, some people question the validity and effectiveness of these treatments.

There is no denying that more and more people are turning to complementary alternative medicines, or CAM, to fix what ails them.

The statistics speak for themselves. According to The American Pain Society, 68 percent of people with moderate to severe pain have used complementary alternative medicine for relief. And Business Week reports $27 billion was spent in the U.S. on such therapies in 1997 alone.

Acupuncture, Reiki, homeopathy, reflexology, hypnotherapy, hydrotherapy, aromatherapy and therapeutic massage are just a few examples of complementary alternative medicines - some more accepted by the public than others.

Do these approaches really work? What benefit does each one have? We spoke with three area businesses specializing in complementary health services to find out what alternative medicine is all about and what they offer.

Acupuncture

Acupuncture is one of the most widely-known complementary alternative therapies. As it gains increasing acceptance by state regulating agencies, insurance companies and federal agencies, acupuncture is becoming more readily available and a relatively inexpensive complement to conventional western medicine, according to a report by Harvard Women's Health Watch.

Most people associate acupuncture with needles, but there's more to it than that. In general, acupuncture describes a family of procedures involving stimulation of anatomical locations on the skin by a variety of techniques, according to the National Institutes of Health (NIH). It involves the penetration of the skin by thin, solid, metallic needles, which are manipulated either manually or by electrical stimulation.

The general theory behind acupuncture is based on the ancient Chinese belief that there are patterns of energy flow, called (Qi), through the body which are essential for health. Any disruption in this flow is said to be responsible for disease, but an acupuncturist can restore balance to the energy flow at identifiable points on the skin. Acupuncture is now being used by millions of Americans in an effort to relieve and prevent pain or to manage a variety of health conditions.

David Sollars of Acupuncture of North Andover is a licensed acupuncturist and a homeopathic and herbal consultant. He believes acupuncture is a great way to help heal a person without overloading the body with medicines. It can be especially helpful with cancer patients who are undergoing chemotherapy, he said.

According to the NIH, there is clear evidence that needle acupuncture is helpful for adult post-operative and chemotherapy nausea and vomiting, and probably for the nausea of pregnancy.

Acupuncture has been known to relieve a large number of ailments. Some of the conditions Mr. Sollars has treated with acupuncture include:

- headaches, migraine, tension
- back pain
- arthritis
- stress-related injuries
- sports injuries
- gynecologic disorders
- carpal tunnel syndrome
- sinusitis
- pain management

Contrary to what you might think,

Alternative medicine defined

The label "alternative medicine" seems broad to someone unfamiliar with the variety of treatments. The following is a list, from WellNet, of some of the more common alternative treatments and practices.

Acupuncture uses needles and pressure to stimulate an immune response to balancing the flow of energy in the body.

Aromatherapy uses the essential oils extracted from plants and herbs to treat infections, stimulate wellness and regenerate energy in the body.

Ayurvedic medicine (means "science of life") is a practice that mixes

Take precautions for fun in the sun

By now we've all heard the message that sunlight contains hazardous UVA/UVB rays that produce unwanted and harmful changes to our skin. Because of the depletion of the ozone layer, more of these dangerous rays are reaching the earth's surface than ever. Before you head outside, here are some important facts about excessive sun exposure, solar damage, skin cancer and sun protection.

America is experiencing a skin cancer epidemic. According to estimates from the American Academy of Dermatology, one million skin cancers will be diagnosed in the United States in 1998 alone. People with fair skin and those who abuse the sun are at the highest risk.

Skin cancer comes in three main varieties. The two most common forms are basal cell carcinoma (800,000 cases/year) and squamous cell carcinoma (160,000 case/year). Together these two types account for approximately 95 percent of all skin cancers. They often appear as red bumps that either enlarge, bleed, scab or become rough. Fortunately, these cancers are seldom life threatening when recognized early and treated appropriately. In most cases, this requires surgical removal of the tumor.

The third and most serious form of skin cancer is melanoma.

Although this cancer is less common than the others (40,000 case/year), its incidence is rising at the rate of four percent per year. In fact, while melanoma was once a rare condition, it is now the fifth most common malignancy in the United States. It is also the most dangerous of all skin cancers. Melanoma typically appears as a new, changing or large brown mole. Often such a mole becomes asymmetric, unevenly colored and develops an irregular border. When caught early, surgical removal of melanoma is usually curative. However, when the diagnosis is delayed, melanoma can spread throughout the body and is life-threatening.

While all this seems like bad news, there is a lot you can do to protect yourself. Your reward for following several simple recommendations will be younger looking skin and a markedly diminished risk of developing skin cancer.

1. Check your skin regularly, noting any new, changing or unusual lesions. Any suspicious lesions should promptly be brought to the attention of your physician. Skin cancer is always more easily cured if it is caught early.

2. Minimize your exposure to the sun, especially during the hours of 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. when the sun is at its strongest. No sunscreen is perfect, so there is no substitute for being indoors or in a shaded area during these hours. You should also avoid other sources of ultraviolet radiation such as tanning booths.

3. When you are outside, a broad spectrum sunscreen and protective clothing should always be worn. Sunscreen with a sun protection factor (SPF) of 15 or higher that blocks both UVA/UVB light should be used. Apply sunscreen liberally 30 minutes before sun exposure and reapply it every two hours or after swimming or other vigorous exercise.

It is important to know that daily, incidental unprotected sun exposure, such as getting in and out of your car, even driving (UVA rays penetrate through glass) produces a significant cellular damage over time.

Finally, it should be noted that several recent reports criticizing the effectiveness of sunscreens have received media attention. These reports were confusing and seemed to minimize the importance of sunscreen. Sunscreens do not protect you from all wavelengths of ultraviolet light and thus should not give you a feeling of complete protection for excessive periods of time. When used correctly, however, they do protect you from most forms of skin cancer and many undesirable skin changes associated with aging.

Alternative medicine has healing effects needle acupuncture isn't painful. Each needle is about two inches long, solid and very fine. The acupuncturist inserts these needles at various points, sometimes up to a depth of an inch. Some people feel a tingling sensation, while others feel a vague aching feeling that usually goes away within minutes.

Besides traditional Chinese needle acupuncture, Mr. Sollars offers some non-needle techniques to achieve similar results. One of those is called electro-auricular therapy, which involves touching the outer surface of the ear with a small, rod-shaped probe. This probe finds the corresponding points in the ear to match the problems in the body. Then, the points are stimulated using the same instrument, according to an article written by Mr. Sollars.

Applying pressure to this part of the ear has been found helpful in the treatment of various illnesses and disorders.

In addition to acupuncture, Mr. Sollars offers services in homeopathy and Chinese herbal medicine.

Homeopathy is a method of self-healing assisted by small doses of natural remedies, developed in the 1800s by the German physician, Samuel Hahnemann.

This approach has been known to successfully treat chronic conditions such as anxiety, depression, Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD), respiratory disease and ear infections. Mr. Sollars said he often uses homeopathy on children, as they (or, more often, their parents) feel threatened by the needles used in acupuncture. "Homeopathy is a great tool for children," he said.

Mr. Sollars also works in conjunction with his client's physician in order to get optimal results.

With Chinese herbal medicines, the patient is given a custom herbal prescription along with instructions for its use. Commonly treated ailments include menstrual irregularities, menopausal syndrome, fibrocystic breast disease and pediatric colic.

Because herbal medicines are not regulated in the U.S., many people are self-prescribing the herbs without having an idea of what's in them, according to Mr. Sollars. "I feel safer if people are getting customized prescriptions," he said. Herbal medicines can be taken in many forms, including powder, capsule and tincture.

"Wholistic" healing

Aaron and Sue Singleton are co-owners of The Way to Balance in Andover, a "wholistic healing center" offering a vast array of services dedicated to healing the body and spirit.

Their business is all about empowering the self through the body-mind connection by integrating alternative therapies.

The Way to Balance offers plenty of different techniques and can find the right one for you. Here are some of the services they offer:

- Advanced bodywork and massage. Licensed massage therapists provide a deep systematic manipulation of muscle that assists assimilation, relaxation and circulation. There are a variety of approaches therapists can use, such as Thai massage, myotherapy, myofascial release, acupressure and integrative shiatsu.

- Medical intuitive readings and healings. Sue Singleton is the resident medical intuitive, practicing the ancient healing art of "reading" a person's energy field.

According to Mrs. Singleton, when she closes her eyes and begins to pray, she gets visual intuitive images about the individual, as well as emotional and anatomical information. She likens what she sees to an ultrasound or x-ray. In this way, she can detect the underlying connection between a root cause and a set of seemingly unrelated symptoms. She can also "see" physical, emotional and past-life traumas in the body.

- Spiritual and energetic healing. The Singletons use their own technique, called The Energy of Life, a unique process used to promote total healing of various physical, emotional and spiritual manifestations of disease. "We combine the energy work with the hands-on aspects of the body," said Mrs. Singleton.

According to their brochure, The Energy of Life process draws on divine guidance and the power of the spirit to determine the physical, emotional or spiritual cause of an illness and its treatment.

- Clinical and regression hypnotherapy. According to Mrs. Singleton, this approach allows a person to go into a relaxed state into the subconscious mind and can be beneficial for things such as smoking cessation.

According to The Way to Balance brochure, clients are encouraged to release emotional and physical trauma buried deep within cellular memory as they penetrate the veils of consciousness and gently move into expansive states of awareness.

Regression hypnotherapy is basically a time-line, where individuals can regress back to when they were younger, according to Mrs. Singleton. Clinical hypnotherapy is performed in a therapeutic setting by Aaron Singleton, a certified hypnotherapist.

Hydrotherapy. This is a therapeutic use of water combined with aromatic oils and sea minerals, said Mrs. Singleton. Benefits include improved circulation and muscle tone, detoxification, relaxation and pain reduction.

Aromatherapy whirlpools, mineral and herbal baths and steam cabinets are a few other treatments offered at The Way to Balance. Sound rejuvenating? The steam cabinet is similar to a sauna but differs in that the person's head and neck are outside, to enable them to breathe better. If you've ever been in a sauna, you know how difficult it can be to take a deep breath.

Steam cabinets have another advantage over saunas. According to Mrs. Singleton, it allows for a strong detoxification of the body at a higher temperature, therefore, it's quicker.

All hydrotherapies, said Mrs. Singleton, are done in conjunction with healing work, such as massages. This helps relax the muscles, making it easier to work on the client.

Reiki

Reiki is a Japanese word which means "universal life energy", the vital force that permeates all living things, according to the Academy of Reiki. This vibrational energy technique is used to improve health by balancing a person's energy system. This natural healing technique feels like the flow of a high frequency of energy into and through a practitioner and out the hands into another person, according to The Reiki Threshold.

Reiki is also called the Usui System of Natural Healing, named after Dr. Mikao Usui, a teacher of Christian theology who rediscovered Reiki in the early 1900s.

According to the Academy of Reiki, this ancient technique can:

- reduce stress
- help alleviate headaches, colds, fatigue, stomach upset, sprains, burns and cuts

- promote recovery from surgery
- ease discomfort of chronic diseases
- aid in withdrawal from addictive drugs

- increase effect of conventional medicines and alternative remedies
- help with overcoming fear and anxiety

- help enable a person to take control of his or her own health and well-being.

Richard Breen, manager of Circles of Wisdom in Andover, has been practicing Reiki (pronounced Ray-key) for 10 years.

Mr. Breen, a Reiki master (teacher of Reiki), describes it as a hands-on modality of healing, which uses 13 to 15 set hand patterns. These hand patterns focus on a person's energy center, addressing the organs underneath.

According to Mr. Breen, Reiki automatically guides his hands to the spot or spots on a person's body that need it most.

Each session typically lasts between 45 minutes and an hour-and-a-half, but it all depends on when the energy stops flowing, according to Mr. Breen. Usually, one visit is enough for a client, although it's not uncommon for someone to visit two to three times. Mr. Breen ends every one of his Reiki sessions by telling his client, "Namaste", which translates to "the divine in me honors the divine in you".

He is the first to admit he is not a doctor and does not diagnose anyone, but says he has gone through seven years of classes and hundred of training hours to learn the art of Reiki.

Reiki acts as a spiritual path, providing strength and guidance so that one can take responsibility for one's life, according to Mr. Breen.

He recalls a woman who came to him stressed out over a fight with her siblings. They had all been arguing over the will of their grandmother, who had just passed away. She didn't know what to do or how to fairly execute the will. After Mr. Breen worked on her for about 45 minutes, he remembers hearing a phrase repeated over and over in his head - "Trust only yourself, I do", so he told the woman about it. It turns out, those had been her grandmother's dying words. After the session, Mr. Breen said she went home, executed the will and all her siblings were happy

Did you know ...

- One out of every 10 Americans is under the care of a chiropractor.
- One out of three Americans used an alternative form of health care last year; 84 percent said they would use it again.
- Almost one-third of American medical schools - among them Harvard, Yale, John Hopkins and Georgetown University - now offer courses in alternative medical treatments.
- One of every three drugs prescribed in Germany is an herb.

with the outcome.

He says there have been four cases where he has performed Reiki on women who had ovarian cysts. After visits to their regular doctors later on, they found the ovarian cysts were no longer there, according to Mr. Breen. Reiki can also be performed on the self. According to Mr. Breen, Reiki is non-intrusive, meaning the client doesn't need to be disrobed during the experience, unlike a massage. A separate room in the back of the store is where the sessions take place. The room is light and airy, with large windows letting plenty of sun in. What looks like a massage table sits in the center of the room, with a pillow at one end. Usually, the person lies down on the table, although Reiki can also be administered while sitting.

Depending on what his client wants, Mr. Breen will put on some gentle music in the background or dim the lights. He does a little bit of meditation before putting his hands on the person, to create a relaxed atmosphere.

Do you have a 21st century smile? Advanced Cosmetic General Dentistry can give you one

What if you could whiten your smile in a two hour visit to the dentist while relaxing in a massage chair listening to your favorite music or even better – watching your favorite movie or soap opera? And what if you could smile for a photo at a wedding or reunion and finally be confident and proud of how you will look in the picture?

Twenty-first century technology has infiltrated the fabric of every profession – and dentistry is no exception. Advanced Cosmetic General Dentistry of Bradford – John Hagigeorges, DMD, P.C. and Associates is on this cutting edge.

"There is nothing short of a renaissance happening right now in the dental profession – a true revolution in the delivery of dental care" says Dr. John Hagigeorges – a 15-year veteran and Tufts University School of Dental Medicine Honors graduate. "Our practice had to totally reinvent itself to serve these cosmetic patients. High tech dental care isn't taught in most dental schools. It's moving so fast, most accredited dental schools can't keep pace! Regional Cosmetics Experts all over the country provide the Continuing Ed Courses, knowledge and expertise. Our staff has hundreds of hours of C.E. courses invested with these experts."

"Our society is experiencing a dynamic paradigm shift in the services patients want from dental professionals for a multitude of reasons. More Americans sought dental treatment last year than ever before. They are focused on comprehensive health to enhance their quality of life, comfort, appearance and confidence. Beautiful white smiles and fresh breath are a priority to everyone," said Dr. Hagigeorges.

What has fostered this shift? "Technology and the changing wants of patients," Dr. Hagigeorges said. "We offer multiple advancements like instant smile whitening in one visit, fresh breath diagnosis and treatment, dental implants as well as digital computer imaging that shows you on a monitor what your smile looks like before and after treatment."

"Our mission is to communicate and raise the standard of care for patient that want excellence. Materials that make your smile last longer and look more beautiful are the new standard. Combine this with individual attention and you've got the ultimate 'win-win' situation. Patients are happier with the results they get and as professionals we are more fulfilled in providing our service. It's very rewarding to have a patient see their new smile, shake your hand and say thank you," said Dr. Hagigeorges.

"Smiles are supposed to be white! Not silver-gray or gold. How can a patient or a dentist smile about a mouth full of old-fashioned silver-mercury fillings or crowns that look unnatural and gray at the gumline? How can anyone enjoy dentures or partials that 'Our mission is to communicate and raise the standard of care for patients that want excellence. Smiles are supposed to be white! How can a patient or a dentist smile about a mouth full of old-fashioned silver-mercury fillings or crowns that look unnatural and gray at the gumline?'

fly all over the place while they eat or talk? All that is history now with the advent of Metal-Free and Implant Dentistry. The results are much more comfortable and absolutely beautiful."

"Our practice has on staff a Tufts University School of Dental Medicine Prosthetic Specialist who trains prosthetic specialist residents at Tufts part of the week. We also have a visiting Oral and Maxillo-Facial Surgeon who places Dental Implants for our patients," said Dr. Hagigeorges, who has specialty training in Metal-Free Dentistry, Hi-Tech Smile Design and Fresh Breath Therapy.

We all experience bad breath at one time or another. Did you ever work with or meet someone with "bear breath" and become horrified at how to break the news to them? National Fresh Breath Day is Friday, Aug. 6, 1999, and is recognized as the perfect day to raise awareness of this very real and embarrassing problem.

"I realized the profound impact of bad breath (halitosis) on business success personally two years ago when I took a test drive with a local car salesman. It was a cold winter day and the windows were closed. We were driving a $35,000 mini van. I had to cut the test drive short. I didn't pay attention to anything else but getting out of that vehicle! At that moment I realized the extremely sensitive and subtle nature of this problem. Needless to say I didn't buy the van! How do you tell someone that they may have lost a $35,000 sale because of their "bear breath?" said Dr. Hagigeorges.

Whether you are the salesperson with a customer, a beautician in a hair or nail salon or out on a special date with a loved one – halitosis and a poor smile undermine your confidence and lifestyle. It may even sabotage that new job interview or your business success.

Among other technology, Dr. Hagigeorges uses a device known as a Halimeter that analyzes the breath for the concentration of foul-smelling gases (mostly sulfur-based) just like the natural therapies with a personal approach to the treatment of disease.

Biofeedback training teaches a person how to modify and control the body's vital functions using simple electronic devices.

Bodywork refers to a group of treatments, such as massage, deep tissue manipulation, movement awareness and energy work, which help the muscles and tissues in the body by stimulation or relaxation.

Chiropractic care benefits the body through adjustments of the spine and joints. Chiropractors aim to influence the body to alleviate pain and reduce physical stress.

Colon therapy works to improve the colon's ability to absorb nutrients and eliminate the body's waste.

Craniosacral therapy is the adjustment of the bones of the skull to treat a range of conditions.

Detoxification therapy helps to rid the body of chemicals and pollutants which can be damaging the body's health.

Diet is more than what you eat. Taken as a medical practice, diet should include looking at how the food you eat was raised and if it was exposed to any chemicals.

Herbal medicine has been practiced throughout history. Today, different herbs can be recommended to help with a variety of ailments or to promote wellness.

Homeopathy is a non-toxic system of medicine, using common sense recommendations to treat an ailment.

Hydrotherapy is practice of using water, ice, steam and/or hot and cold temperatures to maintain good health.

Hyperthermia artificially induces fever in the patient as a response to infection, inflammation or other health problem.

Hypnotherapy is used to manage several health problems, including addictions and psychological disorders.

Juice therapy is the use of fresh, raw juice of vegetables and fruits to nourish and replenish the body.

Light therapy is the practice of using full-spectrum, ultraviolet, color and laser light to aid in the treatment of depression and other illnesses.

Meditation can be used as both preventative care and as treatment for health disorders.

Mind/body medicine, while considered a specific treatment, is actually the embodiment of most alternative treatments. It uses a wide range of modalities to help a person's physical state as well as their mental attitude.

Naturopathic medicine is based on the belief of the body's inherent ability to heal. Daily habits, such as diet, work and lifestyle, are analyzed to determine a treatment or diagnose an ailment.

If your wound hasn't started healing in a month, it's not healing.
It's getting worse.

A bandage can hide a wound, but it can't make it go away. The fact is, a wound that takes more than a month to heal runs the risk of infection, gangrene, and even amputation. The answer isn't just to wrap another bandage around it. The answer is to get help now.

The Wound Care Center™ has a dedicated staff of doctors and nurses who are experts in wound care. We offer a unique and focused program of treatment that will be matched to your individual needs.

If you have a wound that won't heal, ask your doctor about the Wound Care Center or call us directly.

Learning to survive hot weather workouts

By Ira Dreyfuss
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For couch potatoes who begin an exercise program when it's hot, even working up a sweat takes practice.

The practice is called acclimatization. It's the process of getting your body used to the special demands of hot weather.

"You don't sweat as much until you are acclimated," said Dr. Janice Zimmerman, director of the medical emergency center at Ben Taub General Hospital and an associate professor of medicine at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Beginners should not feel alone in this. Even trained athletes who plunge into working out in hot weather could benefit from time to adjust, Zimmerman said. "A period of acclimatization is necessary from a safety standpoint for just about everybody," she said.

The risk in not easing into exercise is in overexerting before your body has learned how to shed heat efficiently. The outcomes could range from having a less rewarding workout to, in the worst cases, triggering an underlying heart problem or fatal heat stroke.

The body has two main ways of doing controlling heat, Zimmerman said.

One is to dilate blood vessels near the skin. Blood that's heated in the body core by exercise can be cooled by radiating the heat through the skin into the air. Dilated blood vessels bring more blood to the skin. "It operates kind of like a car radiator does," Zimmerman said.

The other method is by sweat production, which acts more like the car's air conditioner. Evaporation has a cooling effect. And when sweat evaporates, it gives up heat, which cools the skin. "The more you sweat, the more heat you lose," Zimmerman said. "As people get acclimated, they sweat more and lose heat better."

How long it takes to become acclimated varies from person to person, Zimmerman said. Trained athletes, who already sweat efficiently, take less time than do untrained people to get used to heat. However, the technique of acclimatization is the same for the trained and untrained — starting at a comfortable level and increasing it gradually.

Sweat output requires liquid input to keep the body's water level up. And people can lose water more easily than they realize. "The best way to say it is, if you just go by thirst alone, you'll probably underdrink by a third," said Mike Sawka, chief of the Thermal and Mountain Medicine Division, U.S. Army Research Institute of Environmental Medicine, Natick, Mass.

That's because the brain doesn't sense thirst until the fluid levels are already drawn down. The body then has to play catchup, drinking until the feeling of being thirsty goes away. As hot weather wears on and people

Soy: Lots of promise on the health horizon

What we're hearing about a simple legume, the soybean, holds a lot of promise. Soybeans have been linked with a reduced risk for heart disease, cancer, and osteoporosis. Some studies suggest that they may ease the hot flashes that accompany menopause, too. Those are fairly large responsibilities for a bean about the size of a pearl, but it is these promising possibilities that have researchers anxious to learn more.

We do know that soybeans are a good source of protein, fiber, calcium, iron and folic acid, and they are relatively low in fat. However, besides their nutrition they contain substances that may enhance health. Two of the most widely studied are protein and isoflavones.

Protein

The protein in soybeans does more than build and repair body tissues; it may help lower blood cholesterol levels. Some research has found that when soy protein replaces animal protein (meat) in the diet, total cholesterol drops more than nine percent. In addition, LDL cholesterol (the artery-clogging cholesterol) falls while the HDL cholesterol (which helps shuttle cholesterol out of the arteries) rises. If confirmed, researchers say heart disease risk could be lowered by 18 to 28 percent.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) is pretty convinced soy protein can help your heart. It is considering a health claim that says eating 25 grams of soy protein a day as part of a diet low in fat and cholesterol may reduce the risk of heart disease. A decision is expected by October.

Isoflavones

Isoflavones are naturally-occurring chemicals in soybeans that have many different functions. Two, genistein and daidzein, look and act like the hormone estrogen, but they are far less potent than the estrogen your body produces. Some research suggests that these two isoflavones actually act as estrogen imposters.

In theory, that action should help reduce the risk of certain hormone-related cancers, such as breast and endometrial cancer because high estrogen levels may accelerate the spread or growth of cancer cells.

In reality, isoflavones have shown mixed results. Test tube studies find that isoflavones have both stalled the growth of cancer cells and hastened it. More research is needed to not only identify potential health benefits, but also determine who specifically might benefit from isoflavones.

Soy's role in osteoporosis seems more promising. Once menopause occurs, estrogen levels in the body drop dramatically. It's believed that genistein may jump in and help slow bone loss and perhaps increase bone density. One study showed an increase in spinal bone density when women ate 90 milligrams of isoflavones a day—that translates into 1/2 cup of tofu, 1/2 cup of roasted soy nuts or about 3 cups of soy milk.

Whether or not soy's isoflavones can reduce hot flashes is debatable because here, too, research findings are inconsistent. Because so little is known about soy and the substances in soy, experts strongly discourage the use of isoflavone or soy protein supplements. But, adding some soy-containing foods to your menu might not be a bad idea.

Try substituting soymilk for regular milk. Use it over cereal in the morning, or in place of all or some of the milk you need in your favorite recipes.

What is a pound worth?

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — The exchange rate for a pound is 3,500 calories.

To help you deal with weight problems, the Mayo Clinic Health Letter points out this basic math: Each day shave 500 calories off, either by eating less or exercising more, and by the end of the week you will have lost a pound.

"Of course, if you eat 500 calories more than you expend each day, you'll gain 1 pound in a week," the letter says.

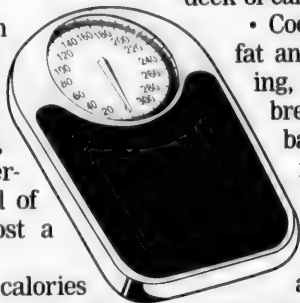

The publication lists some ways to whittle away that pound:

- Eat smaller portions. If you cut the portion size of red meat from 8 ounces to 3, you'll save 250-300 calories. A 3-ounce serving is about the size of a deck of cards.

- Cook it differently. Skip the fat and calories needed for frying, sauteing, braising and breading foods. Instead, bake, broil, grill, poach, roast or steam them. This can save you 100-300 calories.

- Move it. Add moderate physical activity to your routine. Some ways to burn off about 150 calories include gardening for 30 to 45 minutes, walking two miles in 30 minutes, biking five miles in 30 minutes, and washing and waxing your car for 40-60 minutes.

become used to it, they become better at matching their liquid needs to their liquid output, Sawka said.

But a person can lose three percent of body weight before feeling thirsty, Zimmerman said. And people may go through the summer in a continuous state of slight dehydration. This can account for the pounds that many people lose each summer, thinking they've been burning more calories by being more active, she said. "People are proud of that fact, but the reality is they are losing water, not fat," she said.

People also can see their exercise performance drop without realizing it, Sawka said. "If I ride a bike and I'm not competing, I'll just notice I rode a little slower — or I might not notice," he said.

An athlete keeping track of time or distance might feel thirsty but not care, focusing instead on the event, Sawka noted. And an older person might not notice thirst quickly, he said — age dulls the ability to sense thirst.

This is especially a risk for older people because dehydration, which makes the heart beat faster, can trigger underlying problems such as heart disease, he said.

Food labels: Helpful, but sometimes overwhelming

HOUSTON (AP) — If all those numbers printed on that can of veggies are intimidating, just focus on serving size, calories, and fat content, advises a dietary expert.

"Nutrition labels can be very helpful, but the variety of information can be overwhelming to dieters," says Lynne Scott, registered dietitian at the DeBakey Heart Center at Baylor College of Medicine and Methodist Hospital.

Scott, a Baylor assistant professor of medicine, advises limiting fat consumption to 3 grams of fat per serving. "But even if a food product meets this standard, you need to check the serving size. If the amount of food you will eat is twice the size used as a reference on the nutrition label, you'll need to double the amount of fat when calculating total fat grams in your diet."

Fat-free doesn't mean calorie-free, though some people think "fat-free" on the label gives them licence to eat all they want, Scott says. "They can't figure out why they're still gaining weight if they're eating fat-free cookies. I have to remind them that the whole box is not a serving, and that just one fat-free cookie might have 60 or more calories. In fact, a number of fat-free foods have more calories than the regular versions."

Scott notes that many franchised restaurants have nutritional information about their foods posted or available on request, so it's possible to keep track of fat and calorie amounts even when you eat out.

off trouble is to drink even when they are not thirsty, and water is the best drink, the experts said. Sports drinks that replace sweated-off carbohydrates and electrolytes are valuable only for people who exercise an hour or more, Sawka said.

Some drinks should be avoided, Zimmerman said. Alcohol is among these, she said — it is a diuretic, so it makes you excrete water. Caffeine is a mild diuretic, so drinks with caffeine are "better than nothing," she said.

However, a noted researcher sees value in some flavored drinks. The use of salt and carbohydrates, as found in sports drinks, stimulates thirst, said Dr. Oded Bar-Or of McMaster University in Hamilton, Ontario. His research looked at children, but the results probably hold for adults as well, the Canadian scientist said.

In Bar-Or's experiments, children who got a lab-prepared flavored drink with salt and carbohydrates drank enough to keep themselves fully hydrated.

Flavored water alone left his test subjects slightly dehydrated, and plain-chilled water did even less good, he said.

"When I came home from the hospital with Ryan, I had a lot of questions. Jan answered them all."

Audi redefines prestige in the luxury touring class

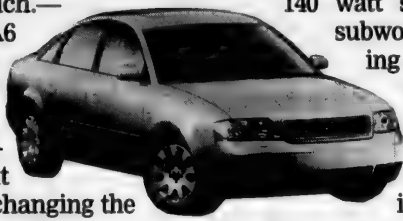

AUBURN HILLS, Mich.—

With its totally new A6 Avant and its revolutionary A6 sedan, Audi has succeeded in taking the mainstream German luxury touring car segment into the future and even changing the way people see cars on the whole.

This A6 duo establishes a new prestige. A prestige marked by superior design, dimensions and dynamics. It asks and answers the question "Can one car change the way you look at all cars?"

Last fall, Audi introduced the daring A6 sedan to North America. So successful was it that it was recognized as a finalist in the North American Car of the Year competition. This past June, Audi introduced the new A6 Avant, its luxury touring wagon, to the market as a 1999 model year vehicle.

With their 200 horsepower, 2.8 liter five-valve V6 engine, five-speed automatic transmission with Tiptronic and an exhaustive list of standard features, the A6 sedan and Avant set a new standard among luxury touring cars. Both of these automobiles offer a choice of three different interior environments, called "Atmospheres," that owners can choose from at no extra cost to personalize their definition of luxury. Standard features such as next generation front airbag supplemental restraints, standard seat mounted front side airbags, dual-zone climate control, a 140 watt stereo system with subwoofer, and a splitfolding rear seat only hint at the amenities contained in both A6s, the new definition of prestige in the luxury touring class.

New standard equipment for 1999 on both the A6 sedan and Avant (with September Avant production) are a larger right outside mirror, lockable headrests for the front seats, fasteners added to the rear floor mats, a force limiter added to the front seat belts, a first aid kit in the center rear armrest and an upgraded tool kit. Added to the exterior color palette is Tornado Red, and a Vanilla with Onyx leather option has been added to the "Ambiente" atmosphere. The A6's Warm Weather package has been optimized to improve the performance of electronic accessories such as garage door openers and electronic toll passes. The package now includes a solar sunroof (which powers the ventilation system when the car is at rest to cool the interior when sitting in the hot sun) and rear window sunshades. Rear heated seats have been added to the Cold Weather package. For those who select the Convenience package, a HomeLink transmitter and outside auto dimming mirrors have been added to this package.

From its striking front end, the A6 sedan is instantly recognizable as a fullfledged member of the Audi family. Its headlights, hood and bumpers blend together to reveal a familiar face while its advanced lighting technology, visible behind clear polycarbonate lenses, give this car a definite gleam in its eye.

The sweeping roofline glides in an arc from hood to trunk defining an interior space that, compared to the previous A6, offers increased volume (+6.6 cu. ft.) with increased headroom (+1.2 inches front and +.3 inches rear) and rear legroom (+2.1 inches). With its flush-mounted bumpers and body colored exterior accents, nothing interrupts the A6's clean, precise lines.

Taking its cue from the stunning Audi TT sports car, the rear of the A6 gives the car a breathtaking finish. A combination of distinct lines, smooth surfaces and three dimensional rear lights make the A6 unmistakable and give it class-leading trunk volume (17.2 cu. ft.) in a stylish package.

The Audi A6 Avant has achieved its own highly distinctive style, although it is derived from the sedan platform. The elegant yet efficient silhouette of the A6 Avant is a result of the interplay between familiar design elements originally found in the sedan and the supreme style in which the designers have dealt with the wagon's body surfaces and curves. The dominant rear end, exciting contours and distinctive lines serve simultaneously to strengthen the Avant's visual appeal while they achieve a high degree of product identi-

The Avant's design is particularly notable for its dynamic side view. A gently rising window line, black center roof posts and bold wheel arches serve to emphasize its innate energy. The A6 Avant skillfully assimilates the daring, innovative design aspects of the A6 sedan, such as the unmistakable Audi face or front end, while continuing the trendsetting design tradition of the Audis that have come before.

In both A6s, Audi takes the concept of personal luxury to an all-new level. Audi is the first non-custom automobile manufacturer to offer buyers, at no extra cost, the opportunity to select an entire interior environment for their car to match their own personal style, not simply an interior color. Called "Atmospheres," Audi's three distinct environments are named Ambition, Ambiente, and Advance. Each atmosphere surrounds its occupants with a distinctly different character. Each atmosphere is available in at least two color choices and can be specified in leatherette, leather (an extra cost option) or, in the Advance atmosphere, a Jacquard cloth. New for 1999 is a Vanilla with Onyx interior color choice in leather as part of the Ambiente atmosphere.

Come see and test drive the A6 Avant and sedan at Park Audi, 222 Lowell St. in Lawrence. Call them at (978) 686-9743 or visit them on the Web at www.parkporscheaudi.com.
